STORM COULD DELAY GEMINI 10 LAUNCHING

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Space officials said today that tropical storm Celia could force postponement of Monday's planned launching of Gemini 10 astronauts John Young and Michael Collins if the storm continues on its present course. The U.S. space agency said the small storm, now about 800 miles southeast of the cape, failed to turn northward as expected and was bearing down on a westerly track that would bring it to this area late Sunday or Monday.

Even daughter Carman, four, found the heat a bit too much. Mrs. Anders said it took about a day for the candles to fold over in the living room.

OFFICER SHOT TO DEATH CHECKING CAR

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—One policeman was killed and another seriously wounded when they stopped an auto during a routine patrol in south Philadelphia today.

Other policemen converged on the area and threw up a dragnet for three men seen fleeing on foot.

At least one man was arrested when he climbed to a roof and then jumped and officers caught him.

Lieut. James Agnew said the shooting occurred when patrolmen Michael Robinson and George Jacobs stopped an auto, "either for a traffic violation or because they were suspicious of it."

CHICAGO (AP)—The Illinois national guard was called out today for the second time in less than a year as three nights of rioting brought exchanges of gunfire between police and snipers with the disturbances spilling over into daylight looting.

In Thursday night's demonstrations 900 policemen ranged through the area and exchanged gunfire with rioters.

Two Negroes were shot and killed, six policemen including a captain were shot and more than 300 persons were arrested. Many civilians also were wounded.

Some rioting and looting continued in the daylight hours for the first time today, but police reinforcements moved in and blocked off streets. Some police units called for more ammunition, but there was no gunfire after daylight.

The exchange of gunfire between police and demonstrators was the first in a major U.S.

city since 34 persons were slain in California during the Watts racial riots last August.

Governor Otto Kerner ordered 3,000 guardsmen from 15 Chicago units of the Illinois national guard to the scene at the request of Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago.

They will back up some 900 policemen who have been assigned to the area.

Policemen began carrying machine-guns, shotguns, rifles and tear gas Thursday night in addition to pistols and night sticks to combat roving bands of vandals, looters and snipers.

Strike Hits Montreal Hospitals

MONTREAL (CP)—The non-professional staffs of seven Montreal hospitals went on strike at 7 a.m. today, as scheduled, at the opening of a strike of 21 hospitals across Quebec.

Pickets set up lines shortly after the strike deadline.

A union spokesman said 7,000 workers were out, 3,000 of them in the Montreal area.

Raymond Couture, CNTU strike director, said today a further 16 hospitals would be strike-bound at 7 a.m. Saturday. He did not say which hospitals would be affected.

Last ditch talks aimed at averting the walkout apparently failed. Mediation between the Quebec Hospital Association and the National Federation of Services (CNTU) was carried on throughout the night in a downtown hotel.

The seven hospitals represent about 4,500 beds.

Two hospitals in Sherbrooke were reported being picketed.

Further negotiations were rescheduled to begin shortly after 8 a.m. Reached at his hotel room by telephone, Paul-Emile Olivier, leader of the hospital association's negotiating committee, would make little comment.

"I can't say much at this time," he said. "However, today should be a very good day for negotiations."

"Always, we have to be optimistic. We've made some progress in the last two days. But I can't say any more."

Landymore Refused To Resign

By JACK BRAYLEY

HALIFAX (CP)—Rear-Admiral William Landymore, sea operations chief and Canada's No. 1 operational sailor, said today he has been fired after he refused to resign "and it's only a matter of deciding the date of my departure."

The admiral, on leave at his nearby Lawrencetown farm, thus confirmed an Ottawa report about his status. He said his dispute with Defence Minister Hellyer is over the armed forces unification program.

"Integration" wasn't the issue even though it was proving to be more "expensive," he said his own command administration costs have tripled under the program. This had made things difficult but "we were trying to make it work."

The issue was the destruction of the navy's identity through a common rank structure with the other armed forces and a single uniform "without any apparent economy or efficiency."

As far as the single uniform went it merely indicated an expenditure "for another 100,000 uniforms." This didn't seem to affect the economy.

SAW PEARSON

The admiral said that in pressing his point he had an informal conversation with Prime Minister Pearson after he was dismissed.

Commenting on departures and rumors of departures from the high command and defence quarters, Admiral Landymore said there had been no "collusion."

Many high-ranking officers had been in Ottawa to attend a dinner for the retiring defence chief, Air Chief Marshal Frank R. Miller, and "I was shocked to find that we had all come independently to the same conclusion about the program as it affected our identity as a service."

There was absolutely "no ganging up," the admiral added with an emphatic shake of his head. There were "no sour grapes" involved because of the head-frog promotion of Commodore Ralph Hennessey over the heads of senior admirals to the rank of vice-admiral.

"In fact," Admiral Landymore said, "we had all made our appeals to the minister and decisions had been made before Admiral Hennessey's appointment."

His own critical talk with the minister took place Thursday, June 23.

The admiral, informal in slack and open-neck shirt after some early-morning exercise in one of his hay fields, said: "It's as simple as this—I can't see where any efficiency or economy is involved in taking away the navy's identity."

VIEW 'UNPALATABLE'

He said he had come to this decision in support of the officers in his own command who found the "unification" prospect "very unpalatable."

"What does the minister expect to gain by destroying our identity?" the admiral asked with a shrug. "His motives may be good policies but there is no

Hellyer Policy Under Attack

OTTAWA (CP)—Unification of the armed forces into a one-uniform, common-rank service exploded today into a public dispute involving Defence Minister Hellyer and Rear-Admiral Landymore, who said he has been fired.

Three other rear admirals also were reported on their way out of the services. Naval sources said actions of the four were coincidental and not a planned attack on integration of command or unification of the services.

Rear-Admiral Landymore, 50, chief of Maritime Command and of the Atlantic fleet, said he was fired after refusing to resign.

Rear Admirals Robert Welland, 48, deputy chief of operations at Canadian Forces Headquarters here, and H. C. Burchell, 54, of Ottawa, confirmed they had asked for early retirement.

Rear-Admiral M. G. Stirling, 51, of Esquimalt, B.C., deputy commander of Maritime Command and commander of the Pacific fleet, was also reported to have asked to be retired before reaching the compulsory retirement age of 55. (See page 19.)

Rear Admiral Burchell said he fully supports integration policies but holds different views from Mr. Hellyer on how they should be implemented.

One source said Rear-Admiral Burchell was concerned over economies in technical services which might risk lack of technical and logistic support for the operational forces.

Meanwhile, Mr. Hellyer was on a tour of Western Canada but said in London, Ont., shortly after reports of the departures that he had received no resignations.

(Meanwhile, it was reported in Ottawa that a hush hush committee of top naval men have compiled a report for the parliamentary defence committee. They will ask for a royal commission probe of the armed forces and the impact of integration of the services.)

The appeal for a royal commission will be presented to Prime Minister Pearson from a joint committee of the Navy League of Canada, the Navy Officers Association of Canada and the Royal Canadian Naval Association. The committee was named June 20 to prepare a brief for the Commons committee on defence.)

The former Conservative defence minister, Douglas Hark-

Civil Control Main Issue

EDMONTON (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer said today the central issue in his disagreement with four senior naval officers over armed forces integration policy is civil control of the military.

The minister told an airport press conference on his arrival to fill a speaking engagement that it is a question, "whether a minister can set policy or a small group of military can dictate policy."

Mr. Hellyer denied a statement by Douglas Harkness, former Progressive Conservative Defence Minister, that he had demanded a pledge of personal loyalty from senior officers of the forces.

"I have never in my life asked an officer for a loyalty oath," the minister said.

ness, said here a considerable number of military officers have been asked to pledge personal loyalty to Mr. Hellyer. They were told that if they were not prepared to give such a pledge they would never be promoted and might as well quit, he said.

Terror-Stricken Survivor Heard Eight Muffled Cries

CHICAGO (UPI)—Each of the eight murdered Chicago student nurses let out a "muffled loud cry" as she was slain, the lone survivor of the massacre told police today.

From her hospital bed, Corazon Amurao, told police of the death cries of the eight young women who were strangled and stabbed to death, one by one, by a tall young killer in their townhouse apartment Thursday.

Michael Spiotto, deputy chief of detectives, said Miss Amurao told him she heard the cries as the killer led his bound victims from the bedroom where he held them captive. Miss Amurao, an exchange student from the Philippines, saved herself by rolling underneath a bed while the killer's back was turned.

The mass slayer took his victims from the bedroom one by one. In every case, Miss Amurao said, she heard "a little scream—more like a muffled loud cry" a moment later.

One of the mysteries of the massacre—called by one Chicago official "the crime of the century"—was why no one in the quiet far south side neighborhood heard the girls as they were systematically slaughtered.

TWO HOURS

Spiotto and a police artist talked to the young nurse for two hours in the South Chicago community hospital where she is staying under a security guard.

Spiotto emphasized he had not tried to make Miss Amurao "relive" her harrowing experience. The main purpose of the session was to get a more detailed description of the killer, he said.

Spiotto said he showed the Philippine girl 180 photographs of sexual offenders and she picked out four or five which she said resembled the slayer.

"The details are now more defined," Spiotto told reporters. "There are a few individuals who are more likely than others. We got more information about the description of the man—the shape of his nose, eyebrows."

FIND KILLER

He said he was "quite hopeful" the killer would be found.

Albert S. Daniel, executive director of South Chicago Community Hospital, was asked whether the killer could have

'JUST STICK THEM IN YOUR GAS TANK'

'Mile Up and Something Wet Nuzzled Leg'

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI)—The Swiss Globe Airlines plane was flying a mile above the Belgian countryside early today when Capt. Paul Wuhrman felt something warm and wet nuzzling his leg.

One look at his visitor in the cockpit was enough for Wuhrman. He grabbed for his radio and called Brussels on the international emergency frequency.

"Brussels, Brussels, can I make an emergency landing? I have three lions in my cockpit."

Thinking it was a joke, the control tower responded: "Just stick them in your gas tank."

Frantically, Wuhrman tried to convince the tower there really were three lions in the cockpit. When he put the radio microphone near one of the lions and broadcast the growl he was given permission to make the emergency landing.

The plane, under charter to West Germany's Lufthansa Airlines, was carrying the three lions — two of them grown and the third a three-month-old cub — from Frankfurt to a zoo in London.

The lions escaped from their cages while the plane was over St. Nicholas in northern Belgium and began prowling up and down the fuselage.

Brandishing a fire axe, co-pilot Max Schomberger, 25, discouraged the animals from again entering the cockpit while Wuhrman headed for Brussels at top speed.

"We were in a cold sweat the whole time," the 36-year-old Swiss pilot said later.

Authorities at the airport summoned three fire engines and called out gendarmes with sub-machine-guns to await the landing.

Wuhrman set the Dart Herald down safely, switched off the engines and followed Schomberger out the cockpit window. They were the only two crewmen.

The gendarmes threw a net over the cockpit window to keep the lions inside and drew back to await help.

It arrived in the form of two zoo specialists from Antwerp. One of them, Dutch zoologist Mrs. Agatha Gyzen, opened the plane door stealthily and stuck her head in.

"What's new, pussy cat?" she demanded, grabbing the cub by the scruff of its neck and lifting it from the plane.

The second time she returned with a broomstick, entered the plane and pushed them out with a gentle "Go on, pussy; go on pussy."

Hellyer's Removal Demanded

Mr. Harkness demanded that Prime Minister Pearson remove Mr. Hellyer immediately and said a royal commission to investigate the whole situation is "an absolute necessity."

Informants said personal reasons were involved with respect to Rear-Admirals Welland and Stirling.

The latter was said to have been offered a civilian job which he wanted to accept. There was no elaboration with regard to Rear-Admiral Welland.

Both men had been staunch supporters of integration of the command structure of the three services, informants said.

The command crisis blew up within a week of another command upset involving three other senior officers who retired last week before normal retirement age.

They were Lt.-Gen. Frank J.

'Too Little, Too Late' Charge Pension Critics

OTTAWA (CP)—The government proposed increased pension payments for some Canadians Thursday and immediately started collecting jumps from opposition MPs who said the program was too little and too late.

Health Minister MacEachen, who had promised the Commons a statement on pensions before the summer recess, rose early in Thursday's sitting to describe a program that would "guarantee a minimum monthly income of $105" to those who now qualify for the old age pension of $75 a month.

But opposition MPs quickly noted that the government plan does not mean a boost to a $105 pension for everyone. It would only guarantee that no pensioner would have to live on less than $105 a month.

This is just a means test under a different name, said Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), and it would take away the dignity of Canada's pensioners.

Eric Winkler (PC—Grey-Bruce) said the program would be "totally inadequate." He tried to introduce a motion for an emergency debate on pensions but was ruled out of order by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe East), noting Mr. MacEachen

said a bill embodying the pension changes would be brought in when the Commons resumes its sitting in October after a recess, said the changes should be instituted immediately. He asked whether the increased payments would be made retroactive but got no reply from the minister.

"Means test" and "needs test" were the words used by opposition MPs in attacking the program. Mr. MacEachen denied there was any such condition.

However, the expression being used in government circles to describe what will determine that supplemental payment is "income test."

Details of the method to be used will be disclosed in the legislation, Mr. MacEachen replied.

FIGURES TOLD TALE

Mr. Knowles said Mr. MacEachen "let the cat out of the bag" when he said the program would cost an estimated $225,000,000 at the start.

That amounted to less than $15 a month, perhaps as low as $11, for every person now drawing.

SUDBURY WALKOUT GROWS TO 15,000

SUDBURY (AP)—All International Nickel Co. operations in this area came to a standstill today while a wildcat strike at the Levack mines spread through all plants at which the United Steelworkers of America (U.S.W.) has contracts.

The strike at Levack erupted in violence late Thursday when a man coming off shift was stopped at the picket line. An argument followed during which another man was stabbed.

Closed down today were all company mines, two smelters, a refinery and an iron ore recovery plant.

About 15,000 men are involved.

Fleury, 52, comptroller-general of the armed forces, Lt.-Gen. Robert W. Moncel, 40, vice-chief for the defence staff, and Vice-Admiral Kenneth L. Dyer, 50, chief of personnel.

Mr. Hellyer said in announcing these early retirements that

Unification Being Studied

Mr. Hellyer told the Commons defence committee recently that with defence integration well along, the next step was unification of the three services.

There had been reports that informal study was being given by defence planners to a common uniform with a distinctive color, different than navy blue, air force blue or army khaki. A shade of green is said to have been favored among three colors considered. The others were chocolate brown and grey.

Commenting on the command crisis, Mr. Harkness said, "This is a very, very serious and disturbing situation."

He said Prime Minister Pearson should remove Mr. Hellyer as the first step necessary to stop the rot in the services.

"This is a very, very serious and disturbing situation," he said. He said that until Mr. Hellyer is removed, "the discontent and resignations will increase and this situation will get worse and worse."

Forces Deterioration Claimed

He said seven of the most senior officers in the integrated defence command are retiring or being sacked because they know the present policies and methods are causing the deterioration of the armed forces.

Mr. Harkness said other senior officers have resigned in protest or been fired in the last two years. Outstanding examples were Rear-Admiral Jeffrey Brock and Maj.-Gen. Paul Bernatchez.

"The armed forces are going to pieces and to pot and some action has to be taken to maintain them if they are to be

Word of the actions of the four rear-admirals came as the integrated defence command switched its service chief. Air Chief Marshal Frank Miller retired today as chief of the defence staff and was succeeded by Lt.-Gen. J. V. Alard.

Unless there is some real corrective action, "we might as well write off the armed forces as a worthwhile operation."

Mr. Harkness said besides senior officers resigning or being fired, "hundreds and hundreds" of junior officers have resigned in the last 18 months. Highly skilled non-commissioned officers are refusing to re-engage for further periods of military service.

"This is the final proof of the contention I have been making for the last two years that the morale and efficiency of the armed forces has been steadily and rapidly deteriorating."

WANTS INQUIRY
Mr. Harkness said a royal commission is necessary to investigate the whole defence situation.

The number of senior officers resigning or being fired was absolutely unparalleled in the history of Canada, Britain or the United States, the Calgary North MP said.

worth a hoot," Mr. Harkness said.

Naval sources said the navy in general is sick at heart over the loss of Rear-Admiral Landymore.

Informants said Mr. Hellyer has refused to speak to Rear-Admiral Landymore for the last 18 months.

Some informants said Mr. Hellyer has taken the attitude that unless an officer is dedicated to the minister's policies, he's automatically put down as opposed.

Mr. Hellyer said "certain personnel" were willing to retire if given pension advantages.

CHICAGO

Police blocked off most main thoroughfares in an effort to halt the looting and gunfire.

In one of the most violent incidents Thursday night, more than 100 policemen exchanged shots in an hour-long encounter with snipers in two high-rise apartment buildings. Police finally moved in and cleared out both buildings.

CHARGES LAID
Police today filed charges of conspiracy to commit treason against 13 of 20 persons arrested in the basement of one building raked by race rioting.

An officer declined to comment on the action except to say the charges were being filed as a result of a conference of police officials, the city attorney and ACT, a civil rights group.

The Negroes slain were a young girl and a man. The girl, Roseland Howard, 14, was hit in the head by a stray bullet and killed as she stood on a front porch during a wave of trouble in the area, which is about four miles from the western edge of downtown Chicago.

The man, shot a short time later, was identified as Raymond Williams, 22, of Robinsonville, Miss. He also was dead on arrival.

It was not known who fired the fatal shots.

Chicago hospitals said they had treated or admitted about 50 persons. Police said more than 200 were arrested.

NINE NEGROES WOUNDED
At least nine Negroes were shot and wounded, police said. Two policemen, including a captain, were shot in the back.

Six other policemen and a fireman were treated for superficial gunshot wounds and released, police said.

More than 900 policemen were sent into the area Thursday afternoon in an effort to quell the disturbances, touched off Tuesday night when police turned off a fire hydrant.

Police said Williams and another Negro man were seen looting a store in the area. They were chased into an alley and there Williams was killed and the other man wounded.

It was the same alley where a policeman was shot and wounded a few hours earlier as officers attempted to find a sniper in a building.

Police cars raced from disturbance to disturbance along a four-mile strip with shotguns and rifles protruding from their windows.

Police used the butts of shotguns to disperse one crowd of some 100 Negro youths.

Up to 5,000 Negroes were on the streets. Some watched and wandered. Some looted.

An early-evening coolness and some rain which brought relief after several days of hot weather was expected to keep the disturbances at a minimum.

But as the night wore on the coolness disappeared and left only the humidity from the rain.

maintenance workers together with ward orderlies.

The federation and the hospitals have been described as in conflict over pay and also over the question of how employees should be classified and their competence measured.

WANT $8 MORE
The employees' average weekly wage has been $68.50. At one point in the negotiations it was disclosed that the union wanted increases of $8 in the workers' weekly pay as part of a one-year contract, with the hospitals offering between $4.60 and $6.60 in a two-year contract.

The hospitals have been braced for any walkout. Some of them by Thursday were half empty following discharge of all non-urgent cases.

Priority was being given to strictly emergency cases, including maternities. Admissions were reduced as much as possible.

Some outside organizations were volunteering to help the institutions, but there also were expressions of caution on the part of their spokesmen lest such help be classed as "strike-breaking."

There are some 50 hospitals in Quebec which are not involved in collective bargaining.

Those outside the bargaining were said to be ready to help any strike-bound hospitals with the care of emergency patients.

114 AIR STRIKES AGAINST VIET REDS

Two MiGs Shot Out of Air

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. jets flew a record 114 missions against North Viet Nam Thursday. Communist MiGs clashed with the American raiders four times.

U.S. Air Force and navy jets also dodged surface-to-air missiles and reported knocking out a major bridge on the railroad line connecting Hanoi with China.

In two encounters with MiGs near Hanoi, U.S. Air Force fighters shot down two late-model MIG 21s. The kills were announced within a few hours of the action, but the navy disclosed today that three F-4s Crusaders were attacked by two MIG 17s 26 miles southeast of Hanoi.

In a fourth encounter, two MIG 17s made a firing pass at a flight of F-105 air force Thunderchiefs and then flew without scoring hits, a U.S. spokesman said today. The Thunderchiefs

KILLING HEAT WAVE MAY BE NEAR END

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A slow-moving cold front offered a glimmer of hope today to areas blistering under a lengthy heat wave, especially in the parched midwestern and southern United States.

In St. Louis and the surrounding area, where 124 deaths attributed to heat have been recorded since last Friday, the weather bureau has predicted the seventh straight day of temperatures of 100 degrees or more.

There was a slight chance, however, that a mass of cool air about 150 miles north of St. Louis might drop into the area.

New England slipped out of the grip of a two-day heat wave Thursday, with the temperature dropping into the 80s and 70s.

AFTER TENSE OPENING

'Most Productive' Commons Session

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—After a slow, snail start, the present Parliament may well turn out to be one of the most productive in history.

When the 1966 session recessed Thursday night after 117 sitting days, the 27th Parliament had passed 50 items of government legislation, including about 20 major bills.

In addition, MPs and senators began work on 15 other items, which are scheduled to be cleaned up after the session resumes Oct. 3.

The session opened Jan. 18 in a tense, electrifying atmosphere carried over from the Nov. 8 vote in which the minority Liberal government came back with 131 of the 265 seats—two more than it won in the 1963 election.

Noisy battles dominated the first three months, first on the government's stand against boosting old age pensions to $100 from $75 a month, then on national security, organized crime and sex.

Bedlam prevailed for three sitting days in early March over the Gerda Munsinger case. The public image of Parliament plummeted. Sobered legislators buckled down to work after their Easter recess.

A steady stream of bills and amendments received royal assent, implementing some of the key planks in the Liberals' election platform.

PASSED WELFARE PLAN
The Canada Assistance Plan became law. It integrates a variety of new and existing federal-provincial welfare programs, costing Ottawa an estimated $250,000,000 the first year.

A $500,000,000 fund was allocated for construction and expansion of medical facilities during the next 15 years. The fund will finance new medical, dental and nursing schools and health research centres.

Another fund of $50,000,000 was created to assist development of depressed rural areas and the Atlantic Development

Board received an extra $50,000,000.

Other legislative highlights:
—The student loans fund was increased to $58,000,000 from $42,000,000, university grants for 1966-77 were boosted to $100,000,000 from about $39,000,000, the Company of Young Canadians was set up to support community improvement projects and technical-vocational training allowances were increased.

—A federal dairy commission was created, crop insurance benefits were improved and farm credit was expanded.

—Personal income tax went up, a gradual removal of the 11-per-cent sales tax on production machinery was approved, provinces were given a 95-per-cent rebate of corporation taxes paid by privately-owned utilities and the investigation of bankruptcy frauds was stepped up.

—Organization of many departments and agencies was revamped in line with a December 1965 cabinet shuffle, the science council of Canada was set up and the Northwest Territories Council was given an elective majority.

Parliament also studied the entire spending program of $8,000,000,000 for 1965-66, which was not approved last year because of a short session and the election.

MADE GOOD START
Legislators turned around and made a good start on spending estimates for the current fiscal year ending March 31, 1967. Spending by 10 departments totalling $825,462,242 was approved after detailed study in various committees, leaving 14 departments for debate in the fall.

The committee system went into high gear, with more than 20 committees investigating such issues as birth control, divorce, auto safety, drug prices and CBC public affairs programming.

Despite the high volume of work, MPs and senators still face a big backlog when they return in October.

Long committee hearings are expected on the controversial revision of the Bank Act and three bills to reorganize the public service.

Major changes in immigration and broadcasting laws are expected to be introduced. The medical care insurance plan will come up for second and third readings.

The throne speech read by Governor-General Vanier Jan. 18 listed 60 legislative proposals, many of them left over from previous sessions.

26 ITEMS PASSED
Of this list, 26 items have been passed and debate started on nine others.

As the recess began, Commons standings were: Liberals, 130; Conservatives, 95; NDP, 21; Creditists, 9; Social Credit, 5; Independent, 1; Independent-Liberal, 1; vacant, 2—total 265.

Senate standings: Liberal, 63; Conservatives 31; Independent, 2; Independent-Liberal, 1; Vacant 5—total 102.

Dock Strike Bill Brings Sharp Blasts

OTTAWA (CP)—Three recorded and eight standing votes on a government bill aimed at settlement of the last and thorniest issue of the Quebec dock strike marked the closing hours of Thursday's session of the Commons.

A stubborn opposition said the government was trying to get advance approval of any recommendations Commissioner Laurent Picard may make in an inquiry into automation procedures in the three ports that were affected by the strike—Montreal, Trois-Rivières and Quebec City.

WILL BE BINDING
Under the terms of the waterfront bill, Dr. Picard's recommendations will be binding on the International Longshoremen's Association and the Shipping Federation of Canada, the parties involved in the 39-day strike that ended June 14.

It resulted in a 40-cent hourly wage increase this year and next for the longshoremen, but the thorniest issue was that of automation on the docks.

Conservatives and New Democrats joined in strong opposition to the bill. They said the government was forcing compulsory arbitration on the ILA as a result of a deal made by Labor Minister Nicholson with the shipping federation.

Mr. Nicholson said strikers and shippers were aware that binding legislation would back the inquiry. The ILA has said it would co-operate with the inquiry and respect the results.

David Lewis (NDP—York South) sparked the first vote with an amendment that would have sent the bill to the Commons standing committee on labor and employment, where he said, all sides could give their version.

QUESTIONS BACKGROUND
Mr. Lewis referred to Dr. Picard's "management background" and said the Commons should not approve anything until it has some idea what he will recommend.

Robert McClellan (PC—Halifax) said the commissioner could force dockworkers to use mules and elephants to unload ships or wear bikinis in winter.

The government benches voted down the amendment. A second recorded vote on the bill approval in principle.

The opposition then forced eight standing votes on every clause and stage of the bill.

It was given third reading on a final recorded vote, then went to the Senate, which passed it in 15 minutes.

GIANT HAIL DENTS CARS

FORT MACLEOD, Alta. (CP)—Hailstones the size of tennis balls shredded crops, ruined gardens and dented "half the cars in town" Thursday night.

An RCMP officer in this community 30 miles west of Lethbridge said: "It was like someone took a hammer to the cars... all gardens are completely ruined."

Most of the force of the 45-minute storm was spent on the town as the storm moved in from the west and then veered north. But total crop damage was reported in some nearby areas.

Heavy rain which accompanied the storm flooded basements.

NATO: Continuing Crisis

ACCORDING TO AMERICAN Under Secretary of State George W. Ball, the "crisis" in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization caused by France's withdrawal from the military system is now over. Testifying before the Senate foreign relations committee, Mr. Ball declared that "The 14 members of NATO other than France have made a clear decision to continue the organization with full vigor. What remains are largely technical discussions . . . regarding the removal of American men and material from installations in France and the terms on which French forces may remain in Germany."

This, of course, is the official view of the American administration. It is not necessarily shared by other well-qualified observers of the European scene — including several members of the Senate committee who gave Mr. Ball a hard time with their questioning.

Much as the administration would like to believe that the NATO crisis is finished, there is considerable evidence to the effect that it is just beginning. It is questionable, for instance, that the "clear decision" of the remaining 14 members to "continue the organization with full vigor" is a candid appraisal. As Mr. Walter Lippmann pointed out in his column Thursday, two of the principal members of NATO, Britain and West Germany, have the status currently almost of "client states" of the United States. And the majority of the other members, while not quite in that category, are certainly in no position to risk American displeasure. It is no great trick, therefore, for the United States to present a picture to the world of a NATO revived and unanimous in carrying on the two-decades-old Cold War tradition.

On the other hand, and in the long run more significant, is the growing reaction of the people in the NATO countries, against the American policy in Europe. Ungrateful it may seem, but more than 20 years after the end of the Second World War, Europeans again want to manage their own affairs without any undue influence from the United States. And governments which fail to take this factor into account, as West Germany's Chancellor Erhard discovered in last Sunday's elections, may find it difficult to remain in power.

Mr. Ball told the Senate committee that it is "unassailable logic" that in the present technological age the dominant positions will be held by "states organized on a continent-wide basis." Others, he said, in an obvious dig at France, can be at best "only medium powers with a limited capacity to influence world events."

While Mr. Ball's thesis is sound enough there is more than one way of applying it. There is the possibility that it will be France which will lead the organization of Europe on a continent-wide basis which would exclude United States influence — and, perhaps, British as well.

Chill Across the Channel

WHEN FRANCE IN EFFECT vetoed British membership in the European Common Market three years ago it was mainly for political reasons. President de Gaulle evidently feared that at that tender stage of the ECM's growth, there was too great a danger of Britain taking a dominant position in the six-nation group. Additionally, there were strong doubts that Britain had the political will to detach itself sufficiently from other commitments — the Commonwealth principally — to enter wholeheartedly into the type of organization which was then envisaged as the emerging Common Market.

Things have changed considerably in the past few years, however, and since General de Gaulle himself has sharply reduced the extent to which the Common Market will have supra-national powers, his political fears about Britain's entry have waned. However, it is apparent that France is still in effect blocking British entry, but on strictly pragmatic economic grounds. France, to be blunt, thinks that Britain is in a mess and must clean up its financial problems before it can be a partner in the European market arrangement.

Premier Georges Pompidou made this point very clear to Prime Minister Wilson in his recent visit to London, the first visit to Britain of a French premier since 1959, incidentally. The encounter between the two men has chilled the air by a considerable degree as M. Pompidou used the occasion to deliver a stern lecture on the sacrifices Britain would have to make. It was done by indirection — by referring to the steps France had taken in the past five years to bring itself to the position where the franc is one of the soundest monetary units in the world.

His country, the French premier noted, had been forced to undertake drastic and unpopular measures such as wage and price freezes and stern direction of the general economy in order to bring inflationary pressures to a halt and improve the country's competitive position in the world. Was Britain prepared, he asked in effect, to take similar action to halt the deterioration in its economy?

The French have made no secret of the fact that they believe devaluation of sterling is inevitable unless the economic rot in Britain is stopped — and that perhaps it is too late now to avoid devaluation in any event. And certainly they don't want Britain in the Common Market until the pound is a stable unit.

M. Pompidou, according to conference sources, is reported to have said candidly: "Now the problem is to know whether Britain wants to follow the same path as France and assume all responsibilities and charges that the Common Market involves. If the answer is yes, French goodwill will be entirely there."

Top Man for the Job

ACCEPTANCE BY ONE OF Canada's most gifted young top-level executives, Mr. Maurice Strong, of the post of director general of Canada's External Aid Office is a real feather in the government's cap.

Mr. Strong, at the age of 37, has an enviable reputation as an organizer and administrator and persuading him to leave the presidency of the Power Corp. of Canada means that the government has fully committed itself to broaden and strengthen the six-year-old EAO.

Since its inception under the direction of Mr. Herbert Moran, the aid office has grown into a complex and sophisticated organization for extending Canadian aid and technical assistance to many parts of the world. It is a program which has received some criticism from quarters which have felt that more could be done — and on the basis of Canadian wealth, perhaps it could. But the program is widely admired for the methods employed and particularly for the careful manner in which projects have been tailored to meet the individual needs of aid recipients.

Mr. Strong's decision to give up a highly-lucrative business career to enter a most important field of public service cannot be too highly praised.

The Inevitability of Change

FROM OTTAWA

Firm on Medicare's Four Basic Points

MR. MACEACHEN introduced the medicare resolution on Tuesday in a speech which was notably cautious, except in estimates of cost. Contrary to a good deal of speculation, sometimes encouraged by statements in provincial capitals, the government has not budged from the four principles for eligibility enunciated last summer by the prime minister. To qualify, a provincial plan must provide "universal coverage"; must offer all the services provided by physicians; must be under public administration, and must ensure portability of benefits.

The minister repeated what he has said on other occasions: that there can be no question of a province opting out and obtaining the fiscal equivalent of federal payments. Opting out implies a previous agreement; it was an arrangement devised to meet the wishes of a province seeking to detach itself from one of the established programs. There is no agreement with the provinces in respect to medicare; there is a federal scheme of assistance open to any province which "opts in" by conforming to the four principles in its legislation.

Universality

Of the four, the most difficult probably is universality which, still means to Mr. MacEachen 90 per cent coverage at the outset, rising to 95 per cent over an unspecified period of time.

In defending this requirement, the minister dealt a little delicately with the distinction between "universal coverage" and "compulsory coverage." He said: "It is fact that if a province chooses to finance its share of the costs by levying a premium, then, and only then, would the question of compulsion arise; it would be the decision of a province whether premiums would be compulsory in the sense that taxes are compulsory."

Mr. MacEachen did not wish to "appear to be splitting hairs" and one can understand his concern. Drawing a comparison with hospital insurance, he observed that "universality is achieved without compulsion of any sort except the compulsion to pay provincial taxes, which we all must pay." This distinction will probably mean a good deal less to the harried taxpayer that it seems to mean to the government.

Provincial Action

What the government is doing through medicare is to encourage provincial action. Health is a provincial responsibility under our constitution, or, as Mr. MacEachen said at another point, a field in which provincial governments play a "predominant role." This has been true in the past and the assignment of such responsibilities to the province was no mere whim of the Fathers of Confederation. The idea was that in general local matters should be left to the provincial governments because they are closer to the people than any government in Ottawa can hope to be.

This form of encouragement seems, however, to be reversing matters. It is well known that not all the provincial governments see eye to eye with Ottawa on medicare. Of course, they are perfectly free to work out their own plans. But if these schemes do not meet the federal standards, provincial taxpayers will have to pay twice. Encouragement of this sort may not invariably foster harmony in federal-provincial relations.

Mr. MacEachen placed strong emphasis on the government's responsibility to serve the national interest. "It may not," he said, "abrogate its obligation to ensure the national character of our country by establishing an acceptable level of services available to all citizens." Our national character must have been a dismal affair while the country was being built because in those days services were extraordinarily meagre beyond the local level. There has evidently been a fortunate change; the more affluent we get, the sounder now becomes our collective character.

Portability

One of the most persuasive arguments for medicare is the advantage of portability. Mr. MacEachen said: "It is essential . . . that the federal government ensures that mobility of the population between provinces does not place any resident (of Canada) in the same position as would apply if he moved to another country." This is admirable but it seems strangely at variance with the minister's instances on the freedom of the provinces. If Mr. Manning, resisting temptation in the manner of the late Mr. Duplessis, declines to co-operate, how can the government ensure that a Manitoban, on moving to Alberta, is not in the position as regards medicare that he would be if he moved to a foreign country?

In practice, no doubt, portability arrangements would be worked out between provinces with divergent schemes. But the federal government could scarcely ensure them while maintaining its proper determination to respect provincial autonomy.

Costs

Turning to the costs of the program, Mr. MacEachen repeated the estimate that the burden to the federal treasury for a full year would be $340 million. This would mean a total cost of $680 million, including the provincial share (and assuming, no doubt, full provincial participation). But the estimated cost of physicians services next year, assuming no change, would be $600 million. Thus the actual net cost of this happy redistribution would be only $80 million.

The minister added that his comments were for "illustration purposes." It has been usual for the cost of government schemes to rise with some rapidity and it will be remarkable if medicare proves an exception. Mr. MacEachen did not identify his estimates and there is little information at the moment by which their reliability could be judged. On this general subject the views of the Economic Council of Canada would be very interesting, especially as the costs of medicare were deliberately excluded from the calculations on which its projections to 1970 were based.

FROM WASHINGTON

Understanding President Johnson

PRESIDENT JOHNSON not long ago recited approvingly a passage he learned as a schoolboy, which said that the finest sight an American traveler can hope to see is the American flag in a foreign land. Remarks like this are all too readily recalled by foreign correspondents here, who are unable fully to shake off the feeling that an undercurrent of jingoism runs through present American foreign policy.

"I have never looked upon any faces that I didn't think would like to trade citizenship with me," the President once said of his visits to more than 30 countries.

Johnson-watchers have worried about the President's judgment calling to mind his 1961 description of South Vietnamese dictator Ngo Dinh Diem as the "Winston Churchill of Asia," and his administration's many erroneous predictions of the course of events in that area. But the greatest worry has been over failure of the government's words to justify its actions in major areas of foreign policy. The justice of the American cause in Viet Nam is still so misunderstood that even last week's conference of state governors treated the war as a hot potato and produced only a weakly worded resolution supporting official policy, but failing even to mention the bombings of North Vietnamese oil installations.

A new book, which has quickly become required reading in the capital, succeeds in a much-needed effort to place the apparent presidential shortcomings in perspective. "Lyndon B. Johnson and the World," by Wall Street Journal diplomatic correspondent Philip Geyelin, presents the Johnsonian foreign policy — "foreign politics," he prefers to call it — as a function of the complex Johnson character.

The President's concept of consensus, he writes, rests "a good deal less on candor than on the capacity to convince by whatever means." The art of persuasion, as Mr. Johnson has long practiced it, is not necessarily related to the truth. Mr. Geyelin quotes an old presidential associate as saying, "You have to ignore the President's own account of why he does things, or even what he has done."

Disconcertingly Oblique

This disconcertingly oblique approach toward a foreign policy consensus has been less successful in achieving understanding than has his similar approach to domestic affairs. Possibly this is because of Mr. Johnson's tendency to see foreign policy as domestic policy writ large.

Mr. Geyelin's book is filled with examples of a strong emphasis by Mr. Johnson on domestic reaction to foreign actions. Thus his tendency to discuss the world in the black-and-white terms of appeasement versus military preparedness, his thinking in analogies to Munich, etc., his fear of domestic political reaction to "another Cuba" or "another Korea."

A frustrated foreign ambassador informed Mr. Geyelin that only "a feature of international affairs that has impact on the home front might engage him (Johnson)."

No Chauvinist

But is the president truly chauvinistic? The answer is no. He can utter simple American patriotisms for home consumption, he can indulge in a Texas hyberbole incomprehensible to foreigners, he can display a folksy manner that members of other societies cannot see as compatible with leadership. But this is only the way his own peculiar brand of sensitivity reacts to the simple fact of life that faces him every day: his country is the leader of the free world and the sole bastion of its defence.

His impatience with those who depend on him and who yet undercut him is understandable — but it does not make him easy to deal with. From his point of

The minister of citizenship and Immigration, Jean Marchand, has indirectly furnished some eloquent details on the attraction our country always has for immigrants.

At this time, he revealed, Canada has more than 20,000 persons without legal status who entered the country as immigrants and who want to be accepted as immigrants, having presented official requests to this effect to the department.

"Moreover," the minister added, "an additional unknown number of other visitors doubtless expected that they will be permitted to stay here, but they have not yet presented requests. . . ."

Are there many countries which let foreigners who entered as visitors wander about their land for months? We do not think so. Such a liberal attitude involves inconveniences and dangers which Mr. Marchand did not fail to emphasize.

It could be that the Munsinger affair and other lesser-known incidents helped to open the eyes of immigration authorities. It seemed to them that the moment had come to "tighten the screw." Let us hope that in doing so they take into account all the human factors involved.

Too often in the past, the law and immigration authorities have been interpreted in a manner which could seem inhumane. With good faith—and tactlessness—individual injustices have been committed. They were not always rectified.

The first extracts we have received of the white paper on broadcasting tabled in the House of Commons strikes us favorably. . . .

Even if it is important to create as soon as possible an impartial authority which can effectively regulate all the field of broadcasting, the No. 1 problem lies elsewhere. It is in the health of the system's principal organization, the CBC. . . .

During recent years, the position of the CBC has been seriously weakened. Governments and Parliament have shown themselves both very demanding and very parsimonious with respect to it. . . . In the public eye, the CBC enjoys far less prestige than formerly. . . . In the very inside of the organization, the events of recent months have revealed the existence of grave malaises. . . .

For one looking at these things from the outside, a first reform is indispensable. The higher levels of the CBC must be reorganized in such a way as to bring them closer to the concerns linked to the content of production. . . . The true solution will consist of naming to the head of the CBC men capable of directing it intellectually and administratively. . . .

Another reform would consist in bringing the higher management closer to the centres of production. A third reform would be of much longer range but much more fundamental. It would consist of rethinking the objectives and rhythm of the CBC in such a way as to eliminate progressively the arbitrary and artificial elements which have gained a disproportionate importance. . . .

view, foreigners are similarly difficult to deal with.

He has passed on to his cronies and to carefully selected reporters blunt and often scatological comments on people like Prime Minister Pearson, UN Secretary-General U Thant and the late prime minister Shastri of India. He thinks in "instrumentalities" rather than in concepts. (These are Mr. Geyelin's distinctions.) He alone is in the ultimate position of leadership in the conflict with international communism, and his realization of this makes it difficult for him to readily accept the honest brokerage of a U Thant or a Lester Pearson.

'Don't Tread on Me'

Mr. Geyelin summarizes Mr. Johnson's common law as "Don't tread on me." ("The least effective way to influence Johnson was to push him publicly"; and "public challenge only seemed to harden his conviction that he had done whatever he had done for the reasons that he said he had done it.")

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home was regarded as complicating Mr. Johnson's domestic position when he came here and defended the sale of British buses to Cuba. Mr. Pearson was similarly regarded when he came here and offered free advice against U.S. bombings of North Viet Nam. Pakistan Foreign Minister Bhutto got a tongue-lashing when he passed a few remarks about U.S. foreign policy while delivering condolences over the death of President Kennedy.

In the foreign aid field, Mr. Johnson can see no reason to accept abuse in return for help, or not to demand self-help and a decent respect for U.S. self-interest in return for American beneficence.

Still to Prove Himself

Mr. Geyelin is neither optimistic nor pessimistic. He can conclude only that "by mid-1966 Johnson had yet to prove himself" and that the test would surely be Viet Nam. But he demonstrates that Mr. Johnson's basic approach is determined by the need for U.S. leadership if the world's masses are to have their equivalent of the "New Deal" and if they are to be spared from Communist oppression in the meantime.

If his actions are often clouded by his peculiar form of utterance, the latter follows from his unique personality and is a fact to be lived with. Those who deal with him must strive to get behind the words. This is a bleak conclusion, but the only course for foreign friends of the United States is to seek to understand its president. Petulance is no solution. Mr. Geyelin works mightily to overcome the petulant mood that creeps up on those who write about Mr. Johnson. Instead he contributes strongly to the needed understanding.

"I DON'T KNOW WHAT WE'RE MAKIN', BUT IT SURE SMELLS GOOD!"

Looking Back

From The Times of July 15, 1966:

The city has charged a local milkman with the adulteration of public with a substance called gelatine. The charge was made after the acting milk inspector Dr. Richards, took samples of the suspect cream. The milkman, Mr. Watson Clark, has brought suits against both the city and the Times newspaper for making and giving voice to the charges. Mr. Clark is demanding $10,000 from this newspaper and an unspecified amount from the city.

'He Made Intellect Respectable'

An Appreciation of Adlai

By ELMO ROPER In Saturday Review

On July 14 it will be a year since Adlai Stevenson died. During this time his career and character have been praised and analyzed and defined. It is clear that many things Stevenson was and did will be written into history. Yet, although much has been included in the appreciative portrait that has emerged since his death, I think perhaps the most important thing has been the least commented on.

His achievements in office, of course, have been recounted. There is an awareness of the grace with which he played his last and perhaps most difficult role of Ambassador to the United Nations. Frustrated at his distance from the centre of power, he yet lent all the fine resources of his intellect to representing that power. We will continue to hear, in the phrases of the President of the UN General Assembly, "the echo of his eloquent and tempered words, the expression of a noble spirit and a high culture placed at the service of his country, but placed also at the service of the ideals of peace and justice."

Constructive Term

There is less awareness of his perhaps even more remarkable achievements as Governor of Illinois. For a man who has been called impractical, it is worth remembering that his term of office was as constructive as that of any of the governors of that state in this century. While he was governor — to name just a few of his accomplishments — a neglected civil service was revitalized, useless political appointments were eliminated, unemployment and workmen's compensation benefits were increased, and Illinois was started on the path upward from one of the lowest levels of state aid for public schools to a heartening increase. He himself once told me that the period of his life of which he was proudest — and which he most enjoyed — was his four years as Governor of Illinois.

There is no question that for most people in this country, Stevenson will be remembered as a Presidential candidate who was greater in defeat than many have been in victory. All the memorable facets of Stevenson's character were revealed in that first, unforgettable campaign when he chose to put the pursuit of truth above the pursuit of power, and decided to "talk sense to the American people."

Captured Conscience

In his role as losing Presidential candidate, Adlai Stevenson captured the conscience and imagination of a particular political generation — the liberals of the Fifties, whom the times were against but who, in fact, represented the mainstream of the future. The complexity of his vision and the eloquence of his speech burst upon liberal intellectuals with a shock of recognition. "He's one of us!" More than John Kennedy, who appealed as much for his youth and energy as for the qualities of his mind, it was Stevenson with whom, as with no other political leader in recent history, they could identify.

And Stevenson will, of course, be remembered for his wit. It delighted all those who had not succumbed to the soggy proposition that to be serious one has to be dull. Unfortunately, in the 1950s too many had succumbed, and their appetite for portentous platitudes was amply satisfied by Stevenson's opponent. It is an odd notion that wit is frivolous, and a dangerous notion if this attitude takes hold among a people. For a people without humor is a people without vision. Adlai Stevenson's humor arose from his ability to stand off and reflect on the political condition, from his awareness of the possibilities of pathos and failure that always lie in wait for noble deeds. He met the supreme test of humor — he could laugh at himself!

Time for Perspective

Adlai Stevenson will be remembered for all these things and more. But the time has come to put them into perspective, for an evaluation of his lasting imprint on American society. And I think that may be something rather different from the uniquely personal qualities for which he was so greatly admired.

What Adlai Stevenson gave us, at a turning point in our history, was a new vision of respect for the intellectual life. To a nation too long dependent on improvisation and narrow practicality, too long scornful of the intellect and its fruits, he became a model of a truly educated man. Nearly a decade before Robert Frost was invited to the White House, Adlai Stevenson stood before the nation as an embodiment of humane and civilized intelligence. Though he was derided by some as an "egghead" in his time, since Stevenson it is no longer possible to think of intellectuals as wild-eyed and bush-haired. He made the intellect respectable, and from these beginnings, who knows? The climate for intellectuals may one day become as favorable as it was in the days of Thomas Jefferson.

In recent years Americans have become very nervous

One year ago Thursday, Adlai Stevenson collapsed and died while walking on a London street. In this article American journalist Elmo Roper takes another look at his career and points out his considerable contribution to U.S. political life.

about learning. The Russian space achievements have shaken us up, and we've gone about solving the problem in a typical American way. We're building more schools, and the kids are competing harder than ever to get into and out of college. I have even heard that football heroes no longer have their pick of the more desirable females on campus. The intellect is becoming a new status symbol, a new way to win. But if we are to solve the tormenting problems that beset us, if we are to reckon with revolutionary changes in our society and our world, we need more than bright young men. We need what Adlai Stevenson had. — For more than anything, he showed us the proper uses of the mind. He demonstrated that the human intellect can be more than merely learned, more than brilliant, or useful, or shrewd. He showed us a mind at its highest functioning, at home with the culture of the past, involved in a continual quest for enlightenment about the present, and imaginative about philosophies for the future. He gave all of America something to strive for.

Retarded Child Needs Home Care

By HELEN WALLACE

LONDON, Ont. — They've been called "idiots," "fools," "morons," "imbeciles" and "creatures filled with Satan."

In days of the early Greeks and Romans they were abandoned and left to die.

During the Reformation they were persecuted because, it was said, they were "possessed by the devil."

Until the beginning of this century they were institutionalized because it was thought they incited others to crime, alcoholism, prostitution, arson and illegitimacy.

They are the mentally retarded — the statistical three per cent of the population now considered intellectually impaired. The simplest definition of mental retardation calls it "a condition of arrested or incomplete development of the mind."

Today more than 100 pathological conditions are known to cause this retardation.

Most parents, when told their child is retarded, respond with shock, followed by disbelief, says Dr. Donald B. Zarfas, director of mental retardation services for Ontario.

Some of the most common questions about retardation deal with the home-versus-institution approach. Referring to statistics and case studies, Dr. Goldberg answered them.

Q. Isn't it unfair to have a retarded child in a home with other children? Aren't the normal ones being deprived?

A. The attitude of the family to the child is reflected in the children's attitude themselves. If parents aren't fiercely protective of the child and don't spoil him, then the other children react the same way. I've heard many stories of a brother or sister of a retarded child going into a helping profession — nursing, medicine or social work. Studies also indicate that families with a retarded child have a higher energy level and capacity to take stress. People become aware of a purpose in life.

As the brigade was going to train young men and women in various useful trades and occupations which in many cases it did, there was a rush at one period to join. The pay was $1.05 a day, much more than the average Ghanaian worker received for a day's food in 1958.

It was too obvious that the real purpose of the men and women in green khaki was that they should be storm troops for the Convention People's Party which had put Nkrumah in power.

Q. What if you keep the child at home and the parents die? What happens to the child?

A. In the future we hope to see community residences for the retarded and they could move to one of these. If a child has been at home and has a good foundation, he's usually able to trust other people when it's time to leave his parents.

Nkrumah Brigade Disarmed

By SIDNEY TAYLOR

ACCRA — Ghana's Workers' Brigade, which provided former president Kwame Nkrumah with his storm troops, is losing its paramilitary character in a shake-up now taking place as an official commission probes its past.

After the Feb. 24 revolution ousted Nkrumah, a general feeling was reported among Ghanaians favoring the abolition of the Workers' Brigade. But social unrest might easily have resulted from disbanding a force of some 27,000 men and women, so a young army officer, Col. P. Laryea, has been given the task of turning the brigade inside-out and giving it a new character.

The Accra Evening News says that of all the bodies created by Nkrumah, now believed living in nearby Guinea, the Workers' Brigade ranked foremost in notoriety as "an instrument for intimidation, terrorism and the rigging of elections."

The newspaper adds that it also was "the dumping ground for ne'er-do-wells and women of dubious character."

Under the reorganization, all members of the brigade will have to carry identification cards and present them before they are paid.

Laryea says that one of his main problems is how to get rid of 2,000 "inductees," mostly habitual absentees, who none-the-less turn up to collect their pay packets at the end of each month.

Wives, Friends

They are the wives, relatives and girl friends of ministers; members of Parliament, district commissioners and party activists of the ousted regime.

The Workers' Brigade was set up by Nkrumah in 1958 to absorb some of the growing army of unemployed and transform them, in the official phraseology at the time, "into a highly disciplined state organization with a high standard of morale."

They were to be on a paramilitary basis and be utilized by the executive for various state and public undertakings in agriculture, building, industry and social and cultural welfare.

As the brigade was going to train young men and women in various useful trades and occupations which in many cases it did, there was a rush at one period to join. The pay was $1.05 a day, much more than the average Ghanaian worker received for a day's food in 1958.

Scientists Sniff Secrets That May Control Bugs of the insect to the pesticide, but without it cotton crops are badly affected by the moth's grubs."

About 50,000 pupae of the red bollworm moth were sent to the Tropical Products Institute during 1965. From the moths that emerged from these, Dr. Nesbitt and her group were able to obtain active extracts of the moth's sex attractant.

"We've done preliminary work on the purification of lip extracts," Dr. Nesbitt said, "but much of our time so far has been devoted not to chemical but to entomological work. We have had to find a means of testing the attractant in the laboratory, because when testing in the field, catches are affected by weather, by how many wild female moths there are in the area at the time and by other factors that can't be controlled."

Dr. Nesbitt explained that the attractant is far from infallible. "In the early stages of the project," she said, "one experimental officer sat up all night with a selection of moths that he had taken home with him, watching them to see if they were interested in one another."

"But the conditions couldn't have been right because the male moths sat one side of the cage and the female moths sat at the other side, and there was just a very weary assistant the next morning and no sign of response at all from the moths."

On the nature of scent and smell little is known. Dr. Nesbitt said, "The entomologists are very interested in the subject and have many theories about how insects are able to track attractive scents to their source."

"At one time it was thought that the insects simply flew up a concentration gradient to the scent, but this no longer seems likely. One drawback to this theory is that the scent is not spread out by the wind into a cloud which decreases in density from the source; instead, the scent exists in complex patterns of filaments."

"A theory put forward by a Canadian entomologist, R. H. Wright, takes this into account. It is suggested that the insect receives the smell as a series of pulses at irregular intervals; so long as the interval between these pulses is decreasing, the insect continues to fly in one direction; but if the interval lengthens, the insect makes a series of violent zig-zags until the frequency of the pulses is again increasing."

"However, even this theory was found to fall down when certain fruit flies were tested — they were found to fly upwind towards a scent by using landmarks to guide them."

But whatever the mechanism of scent and smell turns out to be, entomologists believe that insect sex attractants will be used more and more in pest control — that is, as soon as chemists can make them available.

Their use avoids the disadvantages of conventional insecticides, especially the way in which a species of insect can become immune to a particular product. For it is unlikely that the males of any species will ever become immune to sex.

Canada Filling Vacuum For Caribbean Nations

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — The sun-drenched isles of the former British West Indies have opted for a course that could make them economic and political satellites of Canada, and they seem well satisfied with the prospect.

So does Britain. Said British High Commissioner Sir Henry Lintott at the conclusion of last week's Canada-Caribbean Commonwealth Conference, "We're delighted."

The nascent regrouping of the remnants of Britain's Caribbean possessions with England's former North American colonies — excepting only the 13 of 1776 — has no exact parallel. It is a regional grouping within the

She is currently working with Dr. Gilbert Hughes in his investigation of parasitic water moulds, their effects and damage on fish. Dr. Hughes recently received a $4,000 grant for this project from the Fisheries Research Board of Canada. The grant was part of $39,000 given to UBC under the new federal financial program for marine and aquatic research.

Miss McKay, daughter of Captain and Mrs. D. H. McKay, received her bachelor of science degree with first class honors at UBC in 1963 and is now studying for a master's degree. She recently won a National Research Council scholarship of $3,000. Last year she was awarded a Queen Elizabeth scholarship and Graduate Fellowship.

She attended St. Margaret's School, Victoria, and then took first year at Victoria University. At UBC she managed to combine English and Fine Arts courses with the sciences until fourth year when she decided to major in zoology and botany.

Interested in sport, she plays tennis, badminton, grass hockey and last winter took up skiing.

After completing her degree she would like to teach, possibly in another country.

During the past year she has instructed a laboratory course.

Drunk Driver's Plea 'Patently Absurd'

A Victoria man, who lapsed into a coma after police stopped his weaving car, was sentenced to 10 days in jail Thursday when he was convicted of drunk driving.

Francis Schwegley, 1739 Carrick, was also fined $25 for carrying a switch knife.

"He was certainly in a deplorable state. It's a good thing the police stopped him before he did some irreparable damage," said Magistrate Oster after hearing police testify that Schwegley could not stand up when police stopped his car on Fort Street early in the morning of June 24.

The accused became unconscious in the patrol wagon on the way to the police station and, after being examined by a doctor, was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

He testified he had two drinks to mark the sale of his restaurant. His doctor told the court that pills Schwegley was taking for his nerves could have made him sick when mixed with alcohol.

Schwegley also told the court he could remember nothing of the incident beyond feeling ill after getting into his car.

The magistrate said it was "patently absurd" to suggest Schwegley had only two drinks "unless they were half a bottle each."

The accused pleaded guilty to carrying the spring-loaded knife which he said was for self-defence.

Minor Fined $20 On Liquor Count

Andrew Hart, 18, of HMCS St. Therese was fined a total of $20 Thursday when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of liquor and to driving without car insurance.

Police found a bottle of beer in the accused's trunk when they stopped his car on Pandora July 10.

Hart was fined $10 on each charge.

NATURE FANS GO TO FLATS

The younger section of the Victoria Natural History Society junior branch, will meet Saturday at 1:30 at Douglas and Hillside for a field trip to Goldstream Flats.

Members will study stream life.

Regional List To Include Rural Pool

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Thursday paved the way for a money bylaw vote by Colwood, Langford and Metcalfe ratepayers on a $250,000 swimming pool proposal.

He gave formal notice to Greater Victoria regional board that it will be asked to add construction and operation of the pool to its list of functions.

The board would be able to obtain a better interest rate on the financing of the pool than the three unorganized areas, but only the ratepayers of the three areas would pay off the construction loan and operating costs, Mr. Campbell said.

He also added that nothing would be done at all unless the ratepayers involved voted 60 per cent in favor of the money bylaw. Date for a vote will be announced later.

Council Evicts Chinatown Block Dwellers

Victoria council Thursday authorized city solicitor T. P. O'Grady to issue eviction notices to the residents of the 1800 block, Government Street.

It was originally intended that the order should be issued a month ago but certain technical and legal requirements were never fulfilled.

Thursday, as a local health board in committee of the whole, council gave final approval to the recommendation barring use of the block for residential purposes.

It is expected that notices giving tenants 60 days to vacate will be posted today.

Glovebox Beer Fine

Michael Bacon, 20, of 3899 Ansell was fined $35 Wednesday in central court when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of alcohol June 11.

Court was told police checked the car he was driving in Mount Douglas Park and found five bottles of beer in the glove compartment.

RODD HILL RETREAT

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Without wanting to become a wildlife sanctuary, historic Fort Rodd Hill is fast becoming one.

Six deer have made their abode in and around the national park and have become as much an attraction as the guns and fortifications.

They are often seen gambling across the park's square to the astonishment of visitors and children. One doe, Dolly, this spring gave birth to two fawns who have become photographers' favorites.

"We don't encourage deer to stay in the park," said Jack Rippenzale, park superintendent. "They come on their own. So we accept them as part of the landscape."

Bird life is also so plentiful that groups of bird watchers frequently come to the park in search of rarely seen species.

"Since the start of June, a steady stream of visitors have come to the park," Mr. Rippenzale said.

"We expect attendance this year will reach 40,000," he said.

The fort, built by the British between 1890 and 1895 in the event of war with Russia, will be restored to its original condition. But the program is a long-term one.

The plan is to make the park a museum of coastal artillery equipment.

"We recently acquired our first piece of true coast defence equipment — a six pound Hotchkiss," he said. "But it will take years before we can assemble all the weapons."

In the last year, the fort has been spruced up. Buildings have been painted and landscaping carved out.

A brochure on the history of the park, its objective and plans for the future, will be available in about two weeks.

MASSACRE SCENE where eight student nurses were slain in Chicago dormitory shows with cross symbols where bodies of seven were found and one hid under bed to escape killer. Eighth victim was found downstairs.—(AP Wirephoto)

'DEEP DOWN WOMAN HATER WHO WILL STRIKE AGAIN'

CHICAGO (UPI)—A man forces his way into the apartment of eight young women. At gunpoint he binds their wrists and then methodically kills each of them, one by one.

What kind of man would commit such a crime? And why? Today—the first day after eight student nurses were shaken out of sleep in their south side Chicago town house and brutally hacked and choked to death—specialists in criminal behavior tried to construct a recognizable portrait from a maze of seemingly abstract parts.

"He was a sexual psychopath," Kelleher said.

SURVIVOR

been someone in the hospital, now or in the past. "When you have 600 employees in a hospital you can have some very strange characters in the group without knowing it," he said.

Josephine Chan, director of nursing at the hospital, revealed that a prowler had been arrested three doors from the murder scene and at the same time of townhouses four to five months ago.

LOITERING She said a nurse, not one of the victims, had seen a man loitering and trying the door of one of the apartments. Police were called and the loiterer was arrested.

The nursing directors said she did not link the loiterer with the mass slaying. She said the hospital regularly had trouble with prowlers seen near nurses' residences.

Daniel said the survivor of the massacre, Corazon Amara, was still unable to give a detailed account of the night of terror.

Miss Amara, a pert, 23-year-old graduate student nurse from the Philippines, was the first nurse accosted by the killer when he crept into the townhouse she shared with the eight other young women.

NOSE COUNT The six-foot slayer tied up the young women at gunpoint and then took them, one at a time, into other rooms where he slaughtered them. Miss Amara escaped because she was able to roll under a bed and the killer "forgot to count noses," police said.

Daniel said no one but the police would be able to talk to Miss Amara for several days. "She has no physical disabilities from this experience, but anyone who has been through what she has is naturally under terrible stress," Daniel said.

He had no explanation of one of the major mysteries of the massacre—how a lone man was able to make nine active young women captive and then kill them with no one hearing their screams.

UNDER STRESS "I simply cannot," he said. "I'm not capable of commenting on the psychology of people under stress."

Daniel announced that the hospital is offering a $10,000 reward for anyone who can supply information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the killer.

He also said a fund will be established for the purpose of promoting the training of nurses, in memory of the slain young women.

"It will be a fitting memorial to these young women, especially the six young women who were part of the graduating class and already had their uniforms which, by custom, are first worn at graduation exercise," he said.

Hot Line Burns Rug Company

MONTREAL (CP)—The announcer for a Montreal radio "hot line" program and station CKGM which carries the program have become the objects of a $175,000 damage suit filed by one of the program's former sponsors.

Belair Carpet Corp. alleges that during the period when it held a contract for advertising on CKGM in March, announcer Pat Burns had made damaging statements on his "hot line" program on two occasions and that the company was eventually driven out of business because of the statements.

The program consists of conversations between Mr. Burns and his callers on a variety of subjects.

ALLEGED SLANDER

The complaint stated that on March 4 and 21 Mr. Burns "uttered categorical slanderous statements" about Belair dealings, "so much that the plaintiff has suffered absolute ruin of its entire business as a result."

The complaint also states that Mr. Burns announced on the air that he was cancelling the advertising contract with the company.

The declaration says the defendants "refused, failed and neglected" to retract the statements or co-operate in "minimizing the plaintiff's losses."

The action seeks a judgement declaring the contracts cancelled and ordering the defendants to pay $175,000 with accumulated interest.

Final Chance For Swim Class

Last registration for Kinnets-sponsored swimming lessons at Gorge Park will be held from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday at the park.

The lessons for beginners age seven and up run from July 18 to July 30.

OBEY GUIDELINES

Subsidiaries
Get WarningBy VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Trade Minister Robert Winters warned in the Commons Thursday he would take a "severe" attitude against Canadian subsidiaries of United States companies that did not abide by this country's guidelines concerning good corporate behavior.

The minister made the statement in the House when he was questioned regarding the attitude of the Quaker Oats Company of Canada Limited.

Mr. Winters said the Quaker Oats company president J. G. Wherry had assured him that it will conform to any wishes the Canadian government has concerning the activities of Canadian subsidiaries of American firms.

The minister was questioned in the house by T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party national leader, and L. R. Sherman (PC—Winnipeg-South).

Mr. Douglas asked if the minister's attention had been drawn to a statement attributed to Mr. Wherry that his company will voluntarily act in such a way as not to conflict with the Trading With the Enemy Act, lest this should bring the parent company into conflict with the laws of the United States.

Labor Wins
Guaranteed
Year Wage

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A labor agreement hailed as "a first in North America" has been signed with Aluminum Co. of Canada here.

It eliminates wages calculated on an hourly basis and puts all workers on what a union spokesman called an annual salary.

Lloyd Fell, international representative of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC), said the plan ensures employees a weekly wage equal to 40 times the old hourly wage.

He did not disclose current wage rates.

OVERTIME STAYS

Overtime will still be paid on time worked in excess of 40 hours a week.

Unions involved in the agreement are Local 343, Steelworkers, and Local 54, International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers (IAMAW).

Mr. Fell said two unions bargaining together for a single contract was also unique in Canadian labor negotiations.

Months of negotiation went into the new contract which provides wage increases ranging from 22 cents to 57 cents an hour over a two-year period retroactive to May 18. Vacation and welfare issues were also negotiated.

Firms Merge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 33-year-old Vancouver investment company, Norman R. Whittall Ltd., has amalgamated with the national firm of James R. Richardson and Sons.

Under the terms of an agreement H. Richard Whittall, president of the Vancouver firm, will become senior executive officer in B.C. for James Richardson and Sons.

SEVERE

"I then told him that in the event Canadian industry did suffer in any way my attitude would be quite severe and I would be obliged to take a different point of view. He said he would be glad to conform to any wishes the Canadian government had to express in this regard," Mr. Winters added.

Mr. Douglas asked if the minister considered it in keeping with Canada's dignity as a sovereign nation that an American subsidiary should consider it is bound by the laws of the United States and could ignore the guidelines set down by a Canadian minister?

Mr. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled the question out of order.

TO DANGER

LONDON (CP)—All Britain seemed to come suddenly alive today to the fact that the country is in deep economic trouble and that the government's warning of more curbs may involve new belt-tightening and hardship.

The big questions raised by the national newspapers is whether the government's measures, to be announced in a few weeks, will not be too late.

By JIM NEAVES

SASKATOON (CP) — Consumer legislation intended to protect the public in buying new and used automobiles became effective in Saskatchewan July 1 but it is only a step toward what some dealers hope will be more stringent regulations.

W. T. A. Flavell of Saskatoon, president of the Saskatchewan Motor Dealers Association, said regulations under the Motor Dealers' Act passed at the 1966 session of the legislature are broad but the association would like to have more regulations included.

The act requires the bonding and licensing of all new and used car dealers and their salesmen and call for such dealers to maintain a satisfactory place of business, keep certain records, and use a form of sales contract approved by the provincial registrar of companies.

"In future the association would like to see regulations included providing that all vehicles are properly certified as to safety before sale by a properly qualified mechanic," Mr. Flavell said.

He said it was hoped the act would increase public confidence in dealers.

"We've had an influx of used car dealers during the last few years who operated for a few months and then left the province. In the past such dealers didn't need a licence and they certainly didn't help the image of the industry."

LICENCES ARE FREE

Some 900 dealers, about 400 of whom belong to the Saskatchewan Motor Dealers' Association, and an estimated 1,500 salesmen are expected to obtain licences under the act.

Each dealer must submit with his application a bond of $10,000 if he has five salesmen or more or $5,000 if he has fewer than five.

The bond will provide protection in the event of a bankruptcy or failure on the part of the dealer to carry out a contract.

There is no charge for licences for the dealer or individual salesmen.

When vehicles are acquired by a dealer, a record must show the name and address of the person selling the vehicle, the date obtained and the price paid or, in the case of a trade-in, the allowance made.

When a vehicle is sold, the record must show the name and address of the purchaser, an accurate description of the vehicle, the sale price, terms of payment, whether a trade-in was accepted and a description of it, and the name of the salesman.

The province may refuse to grant a licence and any licence may be suspended or cancelled by the registrar if the dealer or salesman is found guilty of misrepresentation, fraud or dishonesty or otherwise demonstrates incompetence or untrustworthiness. The dealer or salesman is allowed to appeal any such suspension or cancellation of his licence.

HOME GARDEN

Raspberry Caning Time This Month

By HILDA BEASTALL

The home gardener with his garden as a hobby has many advantages over the commercial grower.

Few of the essential jobs to be done take any great amount of time and many can be spread over a fairly long period.

The thinning of raspberry canes is an instance. Modern varieties have a long fruiting period and if we gather the berries twice a week as they become ripe enough to come from the stem cleanly, we shall continue to have fruit for weeks.

Checking the canes as we pick, we find one or two old ones which obviously will not bear more berries this year.

These may be cut out at soil level as we find them.

Other canes, although of last year's growth, will still have green berries, flowers and possible flower buds on them.

These, left to grow with an inch mulch of grass clippings over the soil and ample watering, will extend the season of picking ripe raspberries on through July.

Given ideal conditions, many new canes are making two and three-foot growth now. It is only commonsense gardening to limit the number to those required for fruiting next year.

According to the need, keep two, four or six new canes to each plant and cut out those not required at a point just below soil level.

The new canes are headed back to about five feet in late September or early October when doing the final clean-up in the raspberry rows.

Speeders Top Traffic Fine Revenue List

Greater Victoria motorists continue to lead the revenue parade at the city police courts.

Last month wayward drivers paid $16,690 into city coffers.

Chief contributors were motorists violating the Motor Vehicle Act. Some 336 of them paid fines totalling $6,310.

Speeders led the parade with 89 fines levied for drivers exceeding the posted speed limit. Others were charged with a variety of offences ranging from failing to produce a driver's licence (one) to leaving ignition keys in the car (three).

Second on the list were breakers of city bylaws who handed $5,730.50 to police station cashiers.

Their crimes lay in the parking meter-yellow line parking field.

High on the list were impatient drivers — 18 of them — who were fined a total of $4,150 during the month.

The figures were contained in Police Chief J. F. Gregory's monthly report to the police commission.

Specialist Positions Go Begging in City

The number of unplaced job applicants has increased by only 54 over this time last year, despite a boost of 1,200 in the labor force in the past year, the Victoria office of the National Employment Service reports.

The number of unplaced applicants in the Victoria area stands at approximately 3,500.

But jobs going begging for lack of qualified applicants include various stenographic and secretarial positions requiring first-class shorthand and typing with some experience in law; and several classes of insurance and auto sales.

Jobs for a cost accountant, TV serviceman, wheel alignment mechanic, welders with pressure tickets and low hydrogen experience, assistant housekeeper in a hotel, medical technicians and dieticians are also available.

The Victoria NES office filled 707 regular jobs and 803 casual jobs in June.

The Greater Victoria area still enjoys a high level of employment, said local NES manager George Bevis, but workers with special skills are still hard to find.

EXTRA COSTS FOR CENTENNIAL STADIUM

Victoria Digs Deep to Pay Its Share

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

Victoria city council has taken the municipal lead in an effort to raise the extra $65,000 required to get the Centennial Stadium project underway.

Thursday afternoon council agreed to raise its share of the $65,000 on the intermunicipal cost sharing formula. The city, which has already contributed more than $200,000 to the project, will now pay and extra $26,325.

If other municipalities follow the ground breaking for the stadium complex at the University of Victoria should start within a few weeks.

In addition to agreeing to raise the extra $26,325 council also passed a motion recommending that the council of 1987 look with favor on a request for a further $65,000 next year.

The second $65,000 would go towards floodlighting the field.

RAISE $40,000

Moving both motions Ald. Michael Griffin said it was hoped that various sports associations in the Greater Victoria area would band together in an attempt to raise a further $40,000 for a perimeter running track.

Other business discussed during the extra-swift council meeting included a decision to make a seven-parking-meter space in front of city hall a no-parking area.

Reasoning behind the move is to give city hall an uncluttered look.

"I am in agreement with this," said Ald. Geoffrey Edgell. "There is plenty of parking available in the Centennial Square lot."

SECOND LOOK

The only major holdup during the afternoon business session came when Ald. Frampton called for a second look at the recent committee recommendation to raise the prices on fees and permits charged city tradesmen.

He said it was his understanding that the fees were charged merely to cover the cost of inspection services, not to make a profit.

City manager Dennis Young said he would require time to check Ald. Frampton's claim that the new fees would show a healthy profit for the city.

"You have to take into consideration that the inspection services belong to specific departments," he said.

"It may well be true that the fees charged bring in more money than the actual inspection service cost, but on top of that you have engineers, secretaries, legal fees and such like."

The committee will take another look at the new fee structures between now and

Oct. 1, when the new rates will go into effect.

Ald. Michael Griffin asked for the three-month delay before the new prices were brought in.

"It doesn't matter too much to people working on small jobs," he said. "But it could be quite costly to a large contractor who has to submit bids sometimes months ahead. I think we should give three months' notice that the fees are going up." Council agreed.

Before the decision was passed Ald. Clyde Savage said he couldn't understand why Ald. Frampton hadn't introduced his questions during committee discussion.

SAVED TIME

"It would have saved a lot of time if he had," he said.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgell also had a mild rebuke for the rookie alderman.

"Usually when we want information from various departments we go to the city manager and ask him to obtain it for us," he said. "That's the standard practice and it's a good one because it eliminates confusion and the production of two sets of figures."

Ald. Frampton said he had obtained his information from the treasury department.

Minor issues to engage council's attention included a slight change in the legal boundaries of the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme.

Until Thursday the boundaries were marked on the inside curbs of the roads surrounding the area.

It was suggested that the boundaries be changed to the outside curb to permit any work done on underground services to be inside the scheme.

The change was approved.

Council also opened tenders for the window cleaning contract for civic buildings.

Three bids were received with the high being $9,115, the second for $7,743, and the low bid for $3,780.

Though no discussion took place on the bids during the council meeting several aldermen expressed surprise at the $3,780 bid.

$100 in Tax Fines

Wilbert Barber, 714 Lindsay, was fined a total of $100, on four counts of failing to file an income tax return when he appeared in central court Wednesday.

Pleading guilty to the charge, involving a failure to report tax for 1964, he said he was "just slack." For each count of the charge, he was fined $25.

Decisions on bids are made after department heads have studied tender forms and made a recommendation to committee. Half a dozen bids were received for the city hall heating plant. The high was $4,516, the low $4,114.

Chair Lift Mishap Kills 2, Injures 5

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—A woman and a teen-aged girl were thrown screaming to their deaths on jagged rocks 60 feet below when a ski lift chair snagged on a pulley half way up a 9,000-foot mountain side. Five others girls were injured in the mishap Thursday.

Dead are Mrs. Lucille Peterson, 49, Orem, Utah, and Susan Carroll, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Carroll, East Orem. They and the injured girls were part of a Mormon camping group taking a scenic ride up the slope at Timp Haven ski resort in North Provo Canyon. The ski lift operates in summer for tourist sightseeing.

Two of the injured girls were in serious condition today in a Provo hospital.

Freeze on Wages Studied by U.K.

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson's cabinet is debating a wage freeze, higher sales taxes and cuts in defence spending as it casts about for the next step in its campaign to halt Britain's galloping inflation and increase sales abroad.

By resorting to such classic weapons against consumer spending, the Labor government may be forced to cut back some of its cherished social programs. It will also risk factory shutdowns and considerable unemployment, thereby giving Britons a distasteful dose of austerity after a long period of rising wages and heavy buying of everything from cars to package vacations.

Wilson, a former Oxford economics professor, apparently believes any or all of these hard steps may be necessary to save the ailing pound from devaluation. In the last 18 months, wages have risen 15 per cent, retail prices five per cent but production only two per cent.

Wilson decreed a nationwide financial squeeze Thursday by raising the Bank of England's basic interest rate to seven per cent from six per cent. He tightened credit further by doubling to two per cent the portion of their assets banks are required to keep on deposit with the Bank of England.

By turning now to tactics he so bitterly criticized the Tories for using five years ago, Wilson tacitly admits his government's attempt to reorganize the economy without a measure of unemployment has failed.

Wilson told the House of Commons the next turn of the screw will be applied before Parliament adjourns for the summer early in August.

Bird Hunter Shoots U.S. Tourist

PENDER HARBOR (CP)—A 26-year-old California woman was killed by a single shot from a rifle Tuesday in this community, 60 miles northwest of Vancouver.

RCMP identified her as Diana Dupuy of Long Beach. A police spokesman said the shooting was accidental and no charges are contemplated.

A woman was standing on a wharf when a 16-year-old boy in a fishing boat nearby tried to shoot a bird with his rifle. The gun failed to fire when he aimed it, but discharged as he lowered the rifle in the direction of the wharf. The woman was killed instantly.

An inquest has been ordered.

Two Girls Drown In Quesnel Area

QUESNEL (CP)—RCMP have released the names of two girls drowned in separate incidents Tuesday.

Gwen Kathleen Smith, 5, of Quesnel drowned when she fell while playing on the banks of the Quesnel River.

Linda Maude Nelson, 18, of Quesnel was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital here after she was pulled unconscious from Dragon Lake. Police said Miss Nelson had been swimming in the lake, five miles from here.

Relations Restored

CARACAS (Reuters)—Venezuela Wednesday renewed diplomatic relations with Ecuador after three years of non-recognition of the Ecuadorian military junta. Venezuela broke with Ecuador July 11, 1963, under President Romulo Betancourt, after the overthrow by the military of President Carlos Julio Arosemena. The military junta recently handed over power in Ecuador to Dr. Clemente Yeroi Indaburu with the promise of general elections in August.

50 INJURED

Ninth Explosion Rips U.S. Plant

CARTHAGE, Mo. (AP)—Another explosion ripped the Hercules Powder Co. plant near Carthage early today as demolition experts were preparing to inspect the shattered plant.

It was the ninth blast at the 1,200-acre plant since noon Thursday when shock waves reached Kansas City, 140 miles north, and Tulsa, 125 miles southwest.

The latest blast occurred shortly after 2 a.m. about an hour after a man was heard calling for help in the plant. A rescue party pulled out Maurice Crowell of Carthage.

Sheriff George Hickam said all of Crowell's clothing except his shoes were gone. The man is in hospital in critical condition.

About 50 other persons were injured, most of them by flying glass as windows were smashed miles away.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A company spokesman set the replacement value of the plant at $6,000,000 to $7,000,000 and estimated that 85 per cent of the plant was destroyed. Police said at least 145 houses around the plant were destroyed or heavily damaged.

Plant Manager Robert Good said the rest of the 135 to 140 of the plant's 135 employees on the job had been accounted for.

Most workmen escaped harm because of a 20-minute warning after fire broke out in a truck at a powder magazine loading dock.

Governor Warren E. Hearnes called out the national guard and residents in a three-mile radius were moved from their homes.

Nuclear Test Set In Idaho

ONTARIO, Ore. (AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission plans to detonate a 100-kiloton thermonuclear blast within a few months in Idaho near the southeast border of Oregon.

Rep. Al Ullman, (D-Ore.) who confirmed the plans Wednesday, said the $5,500,000 million project is proposed in the AEC budget now before Congress.

He said the project, called "Schooner," is intended for blasting in a kind of rock that is unavailable in other areas.

The shot is designed, says an AEC report, to blast a crater out of the rock about 1,100 feet in diameter and 300 feet deep, throwing out about 7,000,000 cubic yards of shattered rock.

Sen. Ullman says he is concerned about the proposed blast and will investigate. He said he has been assured by the AEC that it would be controlled and there was no chance of contamination.

Nearest habitation is at Riddle, Idaho, about 25 miles to the east.

CULTURAL discussions will be held in Australia by State Secretary Judy LaMarsh, arriving in Sydney next Friday as guest of the government.

Teachers Oppose Entrance Exams

EDMONTON (CP)—The 14,000-member British Columbia Teachers Federation wants teachers across Canada to "take all necessary steps" to oppose university entrance examinations.

In a resolution to be presented to the annual meeting of the Canadian Teachers' Federation this week, the B.C. group says standardized university admissions tests, now being worked out by the Association of Canadian Universities and colleges and provincial education departments, will force conformity in high schools "inconsistent with present-day teaching methods."

Federation Asks Degree Teachers

EDMONTON (CP)—The new president of the 150,000 member Canadian Teachers' Federation says his organization's objective is that every Canadian teacher have a university degree.

Wendelin A. Herle, of Regina, became president of the federation today as it wound up its 45th annual meeting. He succeeds Wesley Janzen of New Westminster.

"Higher entrance requirements to teachers' colleges and more initial teacher training are the answer to improving the quality of teachers," he said in an interview. "Many teachers still have only a year's training beyond high school. Our organization would like to see them all with university degrees."

Mr. Herle, 38-year-old superintendent of secondary instruction for the Regina Separate School Board, also said the CTF expects one of its major activities in the next year to be a study of how to improve teacher training across Canada and work out some standard of English qualification which would apply in all provinces.

Some teachers have complained that lack of such a standard now results in their often not knowing their status when they move from one province to another.

Mr. Herle said the CTF will turn more attention toward the formation of national associations of teachers of a specific subject. The convention is expected to approve a recommendation to form a Canadian Association of Science Teachers.

"We expect many more such groups to be organized within the next five years," Mr. Herle said.

Such associations would provide their members with news of "new and advanced ideas" in their specific subject, he said.

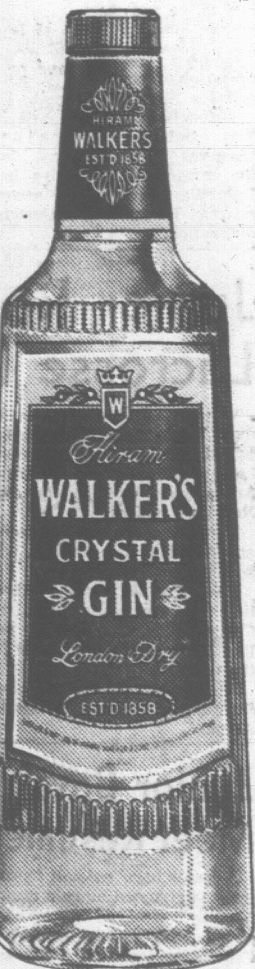

"We believe this is one of the best ways to find out what goes on in the education field in other provinces."

Mr. Herle was born at Pelly, Sask., and began his teaching career in a rural school in Saskatchewan. He holds B.A. and B.Ed. degrees from the University of Saskatchewan and headed the English department at Thom Collegiate in Regina before taking up his present post with the Separate School Board.

Argos Show Life

By The Canadian Press
Toronto Argonaut fans today have reason to believe that coach Bob Shaw can take an untried quarterback and several Western Conference castoffs and make his Eastern Football Conference team a power.

The Argos, whipping boys for just about every Canadian Football League club the last few seasons, hammered the Grey Cup champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats 41-27 Thursday night.

Wally Gabler, a 22-year-old Michigan quarterback who played under Shaw at New Mexico State Military Institute, directed a versatile Toronto attack. It gave Toronto a 34-0 halftime margin and room to experiment with various defensive units in the last half.

In Ottawa, the hometown Rough Riders held off Saskatchewan Roughriders for a 19-10 victory before about 14,000 fans in their initial exhibition game. A 56-yard pass play for an Ottawa touchdown stymied a late Saskatchewan charge.

SWIFT SHINES

Starring with Gabler against the Tiger-Cats were end Pete Manning and flanker Bobby Taylor, former Calgary Stampeder, fullback Bob Swift, a one-time B.C. Lions star, and middle guard Al Eucyer, long a tower of strength for Edmonton Eskimos.

Manning snared five passes for 110 yards and Taylor two for another 45.

Swift bulled his way for 98 yards on 13 carries and Eucyer was one of the best Argo defenders in the game.

More than 20,000 Toronto fans saw Swift, Gabler, Dave Thelen, Al Irwin and rookies Nelson Ardler and Loomis Warren score touchdowns while rookie Ken Ivan kicked five of six converts.

For Hamilton, halfback Mel Anthony, a former Eskimo, scored twice with Dick Cohen and Art Baker getting the others. Don Sutherland, who missed two field goals early in the game before the Toronto attack began to click, booted three converts.

JACKSON SCORES

In Ottawa, quarterback Russ Jackson rolled out for a seven-yard touchdown run and later combined with fullback Jim Dillard on a 50-yard scoring play. Moe Racine kicked two field goals, but missed both convert attempts.

George Reed bulled over from the one for Saskatchewan's touchdown and guard Jack Abeudsch converted it and added a 26-yard field goal.

Saskatchewan, which won its first exhibition tilt against Montreal 23-17 Tuesday, lost the services of defensive half Dale West early in the second quarter. He suffered a shoulder dislocation.

TOM BROWN

ALL-STAR LINEMAN A QUESTION MARK ...

Lions' Hopes for Brown End With 'Amen'

By HAL MALONE
COURTENAY—Survival is a bold word in the Comox Valley.

Airforce jets firing off from Comox offer residents hope of survival or warning in the event Korygin or Chou En Lai pushed the wrong button.

At Lewis Field, a host of rookies and a few old pros are struggling to survive the B.C. Lions' most-feared play—the full-cut tap on the shoulder by the coaches.

Survival is also spelled Tom Brown. Twice Canada's lineman of the year, three consecutive years the Western Football Conference's most valuable player, that's Brown, the people-eater.

Last year a muscle spasm—pulled nerve—gave him fits. Running against the Lions was no longer the problem it had been. Opposition teams averaged 5.3 yards per carry—the most the Lions yielded in three years.

This year in the first drill, Brown rammed the tackle dummy with all his 248 pounds. The dummy shuddered and Brown went to his knees, his face contorted with pain. He complained of a "terrible headache."

They shipped him back to Vancouver. After extensive tests, he returned here last week. The verdict: recurrence of his muscle-nerve injury, so slight no treatment needed. The rider: It could happen again.

The Lions don't talk about losing Brown. Does Richard Burton talk about being separated from Elizabeth Taylor?

But they have drastically realigned their defence this year.

David Skrien, the inscrutable Norwegian, claims that modifications were necessary

"because other teams were too familiar with our patterns."

Pressed, Skrien admits that the new defence "allows us to get by better if we have to lose Brown."

Without cluttering you with too much technical gobbledegook (after two days here you don't say "pass the salt," you say "shoot the gap with the flytrap on two, hup.") Brown is no longer strictly a middle linebacker.

This position required him to meet almost head-on people with malevolence in their eyes and big, mean, nasty blockers in front of them.

Now Brown will split the middle of a four-man line, pulling back only when absolutely necessary. Up front he will attack or defend from an angle rather than a straight line.

In creating this change for the benefit of the team, not to mention Mr. Brown's health, the Lions obviously are thinking of the future with an eye on the past.

Three years ago Nub Beamer unlaced his boots. Perhaps the best fullback in Canada, he said his head had taken more punishment than it needed. Beamer often presented his jaunts up the middle with his head as a battering ram. What batters gets battered.

Last year Paul Seale handed in his key and went teaching. A tremendously gritty and skilled linebacker, he couldn't take the migraine headaches any more.

Brown plays the same way, absorbs the same shocks to the head, the same strains, the same pulls on the muscular-nerve system.

To say Skrien and Co. are hoping Brown can stay healthy is incorrect.

Koufax Having Some Problems—Oh, Ho Hum!

By Associated Press
Last season was Sandy Koufax's best and since he's winning games at a faster rate this season he must be pitching the best baseball of his life, right?

Wrong.

He's having trouble with his control, he doesn't trust his curve and he's not throwing as hard as he used to. At least that's what he said Thursday night after he pitched the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 4-2 win over the New York Mets.

The Mets, victims of Koufax's 16th victory, were unimpressed. They managed eight hits off the Dodger lefty and though they loaded the bases in the fourth inning, Sandy belted himself out by striking out Ed Bressoud.

JOHNSON CONNECTS

Later, Bressoud homered, but there was nobody on then and the lead provided by Lou Johnson's three-run, first-inning homer stood up.

"The last two weeks I've had a little trouble with my control," Koufax moaned after the game. "Especially the curve ball. And it just seems to me I haven't thrown as hard as I have in the past."

Ho hum.

Elsewhere in the National League, Philadelphia Phillies knocked San Francisco Giants loose from first place with a 5-0 victory. Pittsburgh Pirates became the new tenant of top spot by pasting Chicago Cubs 10-4.

Cincinnati Reds split a pair with St. Louis Cardinals winning 9-2, then losing 7-9 and Atlanta Braves beat Houston Astros 7-6.

AHEAD OF LAST YEAR
Koufax, making his second season bid in as many years for a 30-win season, is two days ahead of last year's 26-win pace. Last season, he went three weeks in August without a victory.

Five-hit pitching by Larry Jackson gave the Phillies their win over the Giants. Gaylord Perry saw his seven-game win streak end as the All-Star game winner was shelled in the fourth inning on four Phillie runs.

The Pirates got into first place by two percentage points. Jose Pagan, with a bases-loaded triple, Roberto Clemente, with a three-run homer, and Donn Clendenon with a two-run shot provided the power. Bob Veale got his 11th victory.

In the American League, Detroit nipped Baltimore, 4-3; Chicago beat Cleveland, 2-1; Minnesota topped Washington, 3-1; New York edged Kansas City, 5-4, and California beat Boston 3-2 in 10 innings.

Mack Clubs Clash For Tourney Spot

Boosters and Evening Optimists will start a playoff Tuesday to decide the Victoria Connie Mack League baseball championship.

Although Optimists finished the regular season with 21 victories to 19 for the Boosters, each club had lost only five games.

Since there is insufficient time before provincial playoffs to complete scheduled games with mid-Island teams, the two clubs will duel for the city crown and a place in the B.C. tournament.

which will be played July 29-31 at Windsor Park.

Boosters and Evening Optimists will play a best-of-five series next week at Windsor Park with single games Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. If necessary, a doubleheader will be played the following Sunday.

Duncan and Lake Cowichan will battle for the mid-Island title and a place in the B.C. meet along with Victoria, Mount Pleasant of the lower mainland, and the B.C. Interior champion.

SARNIA SKATER ...

By TONY COSIER
Magy Salter lives in Sarnia, Ontario.

Why Does Magy travel so far for her lessons, passing up a number of eastern figure skating schools closer to her home town?

"Jim," she answered readily. "He's the only coach I've had that ever really suited me."

"I've been skating for seven years," she said, "and Jim has been my coach for six of them."

Magy began skating under Macaulay's professional guid-

PERCIVAL DISCUSSION NOT A PUBLIC MATTER

EDMONTON (CP).—Officials of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada declined to disclose Thursday what they settled in nearly eight hours of discussions of charges that track coach Lloyd Percival of Toronto provided stimulants and sedatives for his athletes.

Walter Stinson, president of the AAUC, said the discussion was held because the Central Ontario Association of the national body requested a study of its actions.

"I don't feel we can comment at this time because Percival has sued the registration committee of the Central Ontario Association," Stinson said. "Writs have been issued and the entire case may be before the courts."

He said the AAUC will seek legal advice before deciding what further action it may take.

ANGLING REPORT

Fishing Guides Go for a Skate

The largest fish ever weighed in at their Campbell River dock has been reported by proprietors of Paint-er's Lodge.

It tipped the scales at 92 pounds and two men combined efforts to land the monster.

Unfortunately, it wasn't a salmon.

John Todd of Victoria and John Barker of Vancouver, both guides at the lodge, had pulled in a giant skate.

However, there have been enough salmon around to keep most Campbell River anglers happy. Boathouse owners report that limit catches of coho have been the rule, rather than the exception, this week.

TYEE NEXT

Big chinooks (springs) have been late in arriving this season but a fair number are now being taken and hopes at Campbell River are high that tyee time is almost here. One tyee-sized chinook of just over 30 pounds was landed at the Big Rock last weekend.

Nothing in the 90-pound bracket has been reported from other Vancouver Island areas but salmon fishing has generally been fair to good for anglers who hit the water in early morning or evening.

Cowichan Bay, where the annual laddie derby starts Sunday, is still waiting for the first good run of chinooks. However, deep trolling with herring strip is producing a fair number of fish.

DERBY SUNDAY

Saanich Inlet, where members of the Chinook Club will hold their annual derby Sunday, also appears to favor anglers using a fair amount of weight.

Several good catches of coho and small springs have been taken in waters between Tod Inlet and Willis Point and at the Goldstream end of Finlayson Arm.

The Becker Bay-Pedder Bay area continues to yield a number of husky fish although the waters from Victoria to Sidney are rated slow.

Reports suggest coho anglers between Nanaimo and Comox should find fair weekend sport trolling for coho with bucketfuls of flies and spoons, especially if the tides include a dash of red.

Waters at Nanaimo, North-west Bay and Deep Bay have been giving up good coho catches and some springs.

Sportsmen at Browning Bay, north of Campbell River, have reported a good showing of northern coho. Portler Pass has been fairly good for coho and small springs and good numbers of jack springs are being landed off the northern end of Gabriola Island.

... AT ESQUIMALT SCHOOL

From Ontario for Coaching

When her coach left Ontario last year she tried two or three other professional instructors.

This year she has followed Macaulay to Victoria, where he is presently coaching 20 of the 60 skaters enrolled in the Esquimalt Sports Centre's summer figure skating school.

Miss Salter is undergoing an eight-week training program in preparation for the Western Ontario junior ladies' championship in Kitchener next year. The top three skaters in the competition move into the novice Canadian national competition.

Magy has her eye on the Canadian novice title, but her main concern is perfecting her skating technique.

She is presently staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fisher, 3535 Maplewood Road, whose daughter Helen also attends the figure skating school. Miss Salter will return home when the school closes for the summer in six weeks.

"For heaven's sake, Tuttle, be careful what you say tonight."

Martin's No-Hitter Was All for Naught

Reg Martin threw a no-hitter Thursday night and lost the Industrial Softball League decision as RCMP dropped a 2-1 verdict to Island Tug at Macdonald Park.

In other games, Bapco nipped Shepherd's Dairy 4-2, Post Office beat Victoria Plywood 9-6 and Yarrows edged Red Lions 8-7.

Dynamic Tanner Sets Two More Swim Marks

HAMILTON (CP).—

Elaine Tanner, 115 pounds of competitive dynamite, exploded for two Canadian native and open swimming records Thursday night even though she was feeling tired.

The 15-year-old student from Vancouver, rated the top female Canadian candidate for the British Empire Games team going to Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 4-13, broke the records within an hour of each other at the Canadian amateur championships and Empire Games trials.

"Brother, I can hardly stand up," she said after bettering her own mark of 2:35.0 in 220-yard backstroke with a time of 2:34.1. Less than an hour before, she clipped three-tenths of a second from the 440-yard freestyle record with a time of 4:46.4.

In the freestyle, she defeated Jane Hughes, a team-mate at the Vancouver Golf and Swimming Club who set the former Canadian mark of 4:46.7 in Vancouver 13 days ago.

Miss Hughes was second in 4:49.6.

SET RECORD

Wednesday, Miss Tanner set a Canadian open and native mark in the 440 individual medley with a time of 5:27.2 and two weeks ago in Vancouver set three national marks and a world record of 2:33.3 in the 220-yard individual medley.

She has been in nine races in two days of the Canadian championships at McMaster University and has won every one.

She followed up her record-breaking efforts in the two finals at night by anchoring the Dolphin Swim Club to a victory in the women's 880-yard relay.

She shared the spotlight Thursday with Ralph Hutton, an 18-year-old native of Ocean Falls, B.C., who attends high school in Los Altos, Calif.

WINS BACKSTROKE

He also won the 220-yard backstroke in 2:16.2, just two-tenths of a second off his own Canadian native and open mark.

The previous native record in the 440 freestyle, 4:22.5, belongs to another Ocean Falls native, attending school in southern California, Sandy Gilchrist, who finished second in Thursday night's race.

The finals of the men's and women's 110-yard breaststroke went to a pair of Montreal swimmers, Donna Ross in 1:23.1 and Marvin Chase in 1:33.6.

Miss Ross, 19, is a second-year student at St. George Williams University in Montreal, while Chase, 17, attends Michigan State University at Lansing. He finished fourth-tenths of a second ahead of Gilchrist.

On the 880-yard relay team with Miss Tanner were Miss Hughes, Pat Gibson and Elaine Clark. Their time was 9:42.0.

The men's 880-yard relay was won in 8:47.2 by the Vancouver YMCA Torpedos, consisting of Ron Jacks, Bruce Sutherland, Jim Knox and Bill Sutherland.

Victoria's Olympian Club placed second in the 880 relay. A member of the Victoria team, Grant Treloar, also came sixth in the 220-yard backstroke final.

The championships end Saturday with the selection of up to 25 swimmers and divers for the Empire Games.

Bigelow Stays Close Behind Senior Leader

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP).—

Jack Little, of Mississauga, maintained his lead in the Royal Canadian Golf Association's senior championship Thursday by shooting three-over-par 75 at the Brantford Golf and Country Club.

Little carded a 76 in the opening round and has a 39-hole total of 151—two strokes better than Dr. George Bigelow of Victoria, B.C.

Dr. Bigelow matched Little's round of 75 but took 78 strokes Wednesday.

All about ladies, lefties and leftovers...

LADIES FIRST

Don't get annoyed because this old goat wants to wonder about young girls. It's the trend.

After all, if Mamie Van Doren (33, she says), can sign papers with a 19-year-old baseball player, and if Frank Sinatra, 38, wants to wed a 21-year-old, it seems only fair that I be permitted to think about young girls.

There aren't any around, save one, and that is a puzzling thing about Victoria golf. Here where the sport knows no season, where courses are easily accessible, and where the price is better than right, good young girl golfers are scarcer than double eagles.

No young ladies have come along to create any great impression since Shirley Fry Naysmith and Dorothy Herbertson Digirolamo started making big news at Gorge Vale over a decade ago.

True, they're saying nice things about Diane Phillips of Uplands. But you have to ignore her (for the moment), because Diane was "discovered" before moving from the mainland about two years ago.

Janet MacWha, Marilyn Palmer and Gayle Hitchens, three young ladies who will bear most of the watching at next week's B.C. women's close tournament, visit us from other corners of Canada, where golf conditions aren't always as ideal as they are here. Miss Phillips also will play Oak Bay next week, but there is no one else in the teen-aged class from Victoria.

What's the problem? "It's difficult to say," says schoolteacher Janet. "First of all, you have to get the opportunity. Then it becomes a personal thing. You either want to play golf or you don't."

"I've known a number of young girls who have shown great promise at 11 or 12, but they weren't around at 16 or 17. I guess they found out about boys," she laughed.

Miss Palmer, the 19-year-old who defends the B.C. title at Oak Bay next week, admits she acquired an early opportunity to play. Dad Palmer is the professional at Kamloops.

"It was the opposite with me," said Marilyn. "I couldn't have cared a hoot about golf when I was just starting. But after I went to my first tournament ('about 13'), and made a good showing, I was gone on golf. Really gone."

The young ladies all agreed lack of good competition has a discouraging effect. That was the recent complaint of Gail Rigby, an Oak Bay teen-ager who admitted her lack of interest, at a time when she showed most promise, can be blamed directly at the "lack of competition."

It's a situation the ladies should look into.

NOW THE LEFTIES

Three countries, 29 states and two provinces will be represented when 300 golfers tee-off next week in the National Amateur left-handed championships at Uplands and Colwood.

Golf-wise, the tournament is made, but complete success can only be assured if the city's tourist industry does its share. Honor those reservations, Leroy, and keep your thumb out of the soup, Gertrude.

This tournament accomplishes what members of Victoria's tourist industry have tried to encourage in recent years, that is to draw visitors from states in addition to California, Oregon and Washington.

While the three Pacific states are represented in generous amounts, there are other entries. They represent Michigan, Texas, Kansas, North and South Carolina, West Virginia, Nevada, Tennessee, Indiana, Arizona, Illinois, Oklahoma, Florida, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Ohio, New York, Maryland, Montana, Georgia, Iowa, Virginia, Louisiana, Alabama, Utah and the District of Columbia.

Take a bow, Milt Dow.

FINALLY, THE LEFTOVERS

If nothing else succeeds, one visiting lefty from a southern state will remember Victoria for its lacrosse... He drew his praise long and loud... Dr. George Bigelow, in the east for the Canadian seniors' tournament, and Doug Munro will play off for the Oak Bay club title later this month... Junior Brian Carberry threw the big scare into Bigelow, carrying the veteran to the 18th in the semifinals... The eighth green at Victoria Golf Club soon will be altered as a memorial to the late A. V. Macan... A plan suggested by the famed architect before his death will be used...

Knowing politicians, Alan Macfarlane isn't saying very much about his game of golf at Mattick's par-three course this week... But Bill Mattick says it all: "A one-armed guy (Mattick) and a one-legged golfer (John Naiton) showed Mr. Macfarlane and Don Telford how to play golf... Would you believe eight-up to be a convincing victory?"

TO END OF SEASON

Rider Suspended

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Racing Commission Thursday suspended jockey Frank Johnstone of Delhi, Ont., until the end of the B.C. racing season Oct. 15.

The suspension followed an investigation and public hearing into betting irregularities at Exhibition Park here.

Soccer's Fever Reaches a Peak

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—Half a billion soccer fans throughout the world are suffering from acute FIFA fever.

Its cause is the World Cup tournament in which the world's top teams are vying for soccer's most coveted international prizes.

FIFA comes from Federation International de Football Association the French name of the organization sponsoring the games under way in British cities until the end of this month. They are being televised and reported in newspapers throughout the world.

West German factories are having trouble keeping night shifts away from television sets.

A big hotel in Frankfurt set up a World Cup cocktail room with a battery of TV sets. The bartenders serve a special World Cup cocktail. If Germany loses, they add a drop of vermouth—the German equivalent of bitter wormwood.

PRINCE FOOTS BILL

Prince Abdullah Al Faisal, a son of Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, brought 25 players from the Al Ahli soccer club in Jiddah to London so they could study the game at the competitions. His case of FIFA fever is costing the prince about $28,000.

The government TV stations in the Soviet Union are devoting more time to the World Cup games than to any other event in recent memory.

In Madrid and other Spanish cities, evening strolling has dropped off sharply as Spaniards rush home to watch the games or listen to them on their radios. Most Spanish factories are closing well before the kick-offs.

Canadian Rifle Team Claims Overseas Cup

BROOKWOOD, England (CP)—Canadian riflemen continued their successes at the National Rifle Association meeting at Bisley Thursday, taking one team event and individual awards.

Today 300 marksmen go into the second stage of the three-stage Queen's Prize event and 18 Canadians are in the front ranks.

Thursday the 12-man Dominion of Canada Rifle Association team won the Overseas Challenge Cup and silver medals. They scored 1,171 to 1,141 for Guernsey and 1,132 for Jersey.

In that competition Cadet Ralph Grant of Dartmouth, N.S., and Arne Sorensen of Calgary had the two best individual scores, 101 out of a possible 105.

Other Canadian scores: Nicholas Beckessey, Montreal, 99; Earl Brown, Calgary, 99; Don Sewell, Winnipeg, 99; LAC Jim Hennock, Toronto, 99; Frank Palmer, Lancaster, N.B., 98;

Arnold Park, Winnipeg, 97; Frank Whittle, Hodgeville, Sask., 96; Derek Daines, Calgary, 95; Dale Gibson, Moncton, N.B., 94; and LAC Ernest Roger, serving with the RCAF at Namao, Alta., 93.

In addition to Grant, other Canadian cadets were showing well. Sgt. Dane Wilson of Calgary shot 171 of a possible 180 to take 17th place in the Donaldson Challenge Cup aggregate, an award based on the first stages of the Queen's Prize shoot.

The aggregate had 400 marksmen entered and it was won by Keith Pilcher of England with 176. Beckessey and Sorensen each had 170.

Cadet Maj. Pete Typer of St. Catharines, Ont., had 169 as did DCRA commandant Lt.-Col. Bill Strachan of Ottawa, and Palmer.

Cadet WO Tom Nelson of Victoria, B.C., with 165, Cadet Capt. Bill Cottle of Winnipeg and Cadet Lieut. Tony Betts of Shanty Bay, Ont., with 164, won tyro prizes.

Nelson, 17, who has been shooting competitively for only about three years, qualified for the final of the St. George's Challenge after a shootoff.

In a tie-shoot for riflemen scoring 95 in Wednesday's first stage of the Queen's Prize, Maj. Dick Hampton of Toronto, Brown and Gibson were successful in finding spots in the semi-final today.

Cadet Nelson was the best Canadian shot in the Duke of Gloucester Trophy match, finishing sixth with 70. It was one less than Pilcher and fellow Briton A. E. Collins, who tied at 71 and will shoot-off later.

Kings downed Dormans 6-1 on the strength of Al Graham's three-hitter in an IAA Softball League game at Central Park Thursday night. The win moved Kings to within 1½ games of second-place Dormans and three games of first-place William Head.

Sunday, Dormans play a doubleheader at William Head against the Steelers.

Big Cuts Seen In Plane Fares

More Major Airlines to Merge
Forecasts Royal Dutch Official

By AB KENT

Transatlantic air fares are likely to be halved in the next five years, bringing a major dilemma to the world's major carriers.

This is the prediction of A. C. Koreman, Canadian general manager of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, who visited Victoria Thursday.

In his first trip to the B.C. capital from head office in Montreal, Mr. Koreman noted a trend toward lower fares for Atlantic flights has put the tariffs at an average $400. Another $200 could be lopped off in the next five years, he said.

The air travel industry is going for mass market and volume traffic in a big way.

'JUMBO' PLANES

"Soon it will be uneconomic to keep existing jet liners in operation," Mr. Koreman said.

The way points to "jumbo" aircraft capable of transporting several hundred passengers at a time, and naturally these will be immensely costly.

Few lines will be able to finance prices estimated at $20 to $25 million per plane when they become available.

Therefore, Mr. Koreman feels, there is likely to be more mergers of big airlines to bring resources within range of prices.

And there will be much more close co-operation between the world's air carriers, expanding the idea of air union as it already exists in Europe, he said.

CO-OPERATION

There is some evidence of co-operation in Canada now.

Auto Traffic Banned

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—Florence is imposing a daily, 2-hour ban on automobile traffic in the centre of the city, granting tourists a more leisurely look at some of its most famous landmarks. The official announcement Wednesday said that starting Saturday cars would be kept out of the centre from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Funeral Saturday

DUNCAN—Funeral services will be held here Saturday for Michael Allan Marrs, 30, who died in a logging accident at Kennedy Lake July 11. Funeral will be from Hirst's at 2 p.m. notable between KLM and Canadian Pacific Airlines, and between Air Canada and British Overseas Airways Corp.

But Mr. Koreman voices a complaint common to countries with airlines competing with Canadian carriers, a problem he predicts will be aired in Parliament soon.

That is—Canadian air policy is restrictive and shows too much favor for Canadian airlines.

"Canada maintains a position that Canadian carriers should fly from all points in Canada to a certain point in another country, and that a carrier from that country should fly from all points in that country to a certain point in Canada," Mr. Koreman said.

PRISONER OF WAR

"Since I speak as a representative of a very small country with one international airport, I feel we are at a distinct disadvantage. We are denied the right to fly from any other point than Montreal."

"But CPA flies from Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Toronto and Montreal into Amsterdam. They have the market from across Canada to Holland and points beyond and we don't have access to that market, except via Montreal."

Yet, he said, CPA is unable to handle the market by itself. Koreman, a lawyer, has been with the government-controlled Royal Dutch nearly 20 years prior to which he was with the Dutch civil aviation department, equivalent of Canada's Civil Aviation Branch.

But for 3½ years, before that he was a prisoner of the Japanese in Java, having been taken as an artillery lieutenant in the fall of the Dutch East Indies.

He makes these further predictions:

• The struggle for supremacy in the world's "super" aircraft industry will be between Boeing and Lockheed, not between Boeing and Douglas as in the current era;

• Amsterdam's new Schiphol international airport will be Europe's largest, most modern, when it opens in April next year and make Holland the number one European tourist centre;

• KLM will then take a giant step toward solving the main problem facing the world's airlines—fast, accurate reservations—and will apply an automated system to its international operations.

FARAWAY PLACES ON A FAIRWAY

By GORDON RITCHIE

Golfers who find local courses difficult don't know how lucky they are.

Ted Williams, a 60-year Vancouver Island resident who recently revisited his South African birthplace, could tell them a story or two.

About Cayuga grass rough can golf courses.

About Cayuga grass rough so thick you could hide in it. About native caddies ferreting out lost balls with their toes.

Since Mr. Williams took up golf 20 years ago at the age of 57 the game has lured him to courses in Singapore, Hong Kong, Rhodesia, Yokohama, Formosa, Mexico and South Africa.

EX-TRACK STAR

A track star in his youth and a cricketer with the Duncan team, Mr. Williams took up golf on retirement as a relaxing pastime.

Relaxation to him is 18 holes a day on the Uplands course.

But since his marriage two months ago he has cut back to three games a week.

"Marriage takes up a lot of time," he says with satisfaction, as his wife Elizabeth irons away in the kitchen.

Mr. Williams is pretty good with an iron too.

COME CLOSE

He has never shot his age but he came close with back-to-back 79s a while ago.

And in the recent "beat the champ" contest in which golfers all across the country paid a dollar to try and beat last year's Canadian champion's score, he did.

His 84 with a 15 handicap won him a medal, and some startled looks.

Work Stoppage By Hospital's Help Spreads

NEW YORK (AP)—A work stoppage by non-medical employees demanding more pay spread Thursday from Montefiore Hospital in the Bronx to Mount Sinai Hospital in Manhattan.

About 300 of the employees appeared outside Mount Sinai Hospital and refused to report for work this morning.

Dr. David Pomrinse, associate director of the hospital, which has 1,500 patients, said that if the stoppage continues a transfer of patients to other hospitals would start later in the day.

Pomrinse said the hospital will not open its outpatient clinic today. The surgery schedule will be maintained, he said.

Mount Sinai has about 1,200 non-medical workers.

As picketing resumed outside Montefiore Hospital today, a spokesman for the hospital said he did not expect any of the non-medical employees to report for work today.

Montefiore hospital evacuated about 150 of its 629 patients Wednesday.

Montefiore normally has a total of 1,300 non-medical employees in a 24-hour period, and about 600 are on the day shift.

Last-Ditch Peace Effort By Mrs. Gandhi in Moscow

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP)—Prime Minister Gandhi of India holds a final round of talks with Premier Alexei Kosygin of the Soviet Union today amid indications the Russians have turned down her Viet Nam peace proposal.

She was expected to make a last-ditch effort to get Kosygin's backing for her call to reconvene the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina but her task appeared hopeless.

In an address Thursday at an Indo-Soviet friendship rally at the Kremlin, at which both leaders spoke, Kosygin ignored the Indian proposal presented to him in private talks.

Instead he hit out at United States "vandalism and barbar-ity" and renewed an earlier pledge to send volunteers with arms to Viet Nam if North Viet Nam requests them.

WANTS BOMBS STOPPED

In her address, which preceded Kosygin's, the Indian premier said there should be an end to all bombing of North Viet Nam and that involved parties should take the Viet Nam issue to the conference table. There was no alternative course.

The sources said Kosygin had made clear even before the rally in discussions with Mrs. Gandhi that the Soviet Union could not act without a request for peace talks from Hanoi.

So far the North Vietnamese—and China—have said they are opposed to negotiations without prior acceptance by the United States of Communist conditions.

Mrs. Gandhi leaves for home Saturday. An hour after she flies out, British Premier Wilson arrives on a similar Viet Nam peace probe. But diplomatic observers said the Russian response to Mrs. Gandhi made it virtually certain he also will fail.

Bennett's Before, After Surplus Story

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

Premier Bennett probably will produce his annual mid-year economic review next week and it could intensify the re-emerging election rumors.

The budgetary review of fiscal 1965-66 could show a surplus of about $70 million accumulated during the year which ended last March 31 and this automatically would increase the speculation now current among MLAs that whatever stayed the premier's hand last spring will not prevent him from calling an election for September, probably on the 12th.

The expected record surplus contrasts sharply with the premier's own prediction last year that it would be barely more than $1 million.

"So, it might be instructive to follow the premier's comments on the surplus in one budget — fiscal 1964-65, the latest available in full "before" and "after" documentation.

In February, 1964, predicted that budget would produce a surplus of $450,000 out of a total revenue of $396 million.

Last July, in the mid-summer economic review, the first authoritative accounting of fiscal 1964-65 showed that his prediction was more than 1,000 per cent wrong!

The actual surplus realized in the single year under study was not slightly less than half a million dollars but just a shade under $53.5 million.

What can be expected when the 1965-66 fiscal year's operations are revealed in the coming economic review?

Well, Mr. Bennett's budget speech last year predicted a revenue surplus of $1,226,000. But already this year the premier has intimated, in his annual vague manner, that this surplus should be at least $5 million.

That's a tip off that things have been might good — actually 12 per cent better than the economy was estimated last year he has said in one speech — and the premier once again is preparing everyone for the pleasant shock of seeing him away out on his surplus prediction, although, of course, he's planned it that way all along.

Using the premier's own rule-of-thumb increment, 12 per cent more than the $447,227,000 he showed in revenue estimate last year would work out to better than $53.5 million again.

But that's not all. Recently, the premier proudly told reporters that besides the Columbia River treaty advance payments, the province has $100 million invested in various short-term paper and other securities which it could use at any time to stem any financial problem.

It is generally believed among those who try to figure out Mr. Bennett's financial manoeuvres that the actual surplus at this moment approaches $120,000 million — far too large a sum to admit for a politician who is constantly criticized for skimping on health and welfare projects.

So how much of the nest egg will be visible next week? My guess is about $70 million, but it could be more.

And the premier, who has adopted Keynesian terminology in describing his economic policies since Ralph Lofmark quit teaching finance at UBC to join the cabinet, undoubtedly will say this is a very prudent amount to keep in the kitty, repeating his statement in his last budget that:

"It is our intention to have sufficient sums in reserve to reasonably forestall any emergency due to local, national or international influences which might adversely affect our revenues or expenditures."

"The setting up of a budgetary reserve in times of expanding revenues is deemed essential for the continued success of the province's human betterment and resource development programs."

The last sentence is significant when juxtaposed with the premier's statement only this week that the $50 million he recently borrowed through Wall Street for the power project construction bills means "financing is well arranged for several months in advance for B.C. Hydro."

That means that Hydro knows where the money is coming from for completing these huge projects only a few months ahead of the bills. What if the rest of the $50 million Hydro needs before next spring can't be borrowed on the Canadian market?

No wonder the premier needs a budgetary reserve of huge proportions when the biggest Crown corporation is virtually living hand-to-mouth.

GUEST SPEAKER at Monday's meeting of Victoria Gyro Club in Empress Hotel will be Captain Fred C. Frewer, Base Commander of Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt. The veteran naval officer will discuss new base concept of Canada's integrated forces, with emphasis on the one he commands. Prior to his present appointment, Capt. Frewer served as Chief of Staff to Maritime Commander (Pacific) at local naval base.

Gallop Bird Finishes First In Field of 95

A bird owned by W. Gallop of Victoria came home first in a Capital City Racing Pigeon Club Edson, Alberta, to Victoria flight Friday.

The pigeon made the 470-mile trip in 17 hours, 24 minutes and 47 seconds, more than an hour ahead of other birds.

Birds belonging to B. Owens and R. Roe came second and third respectively.

Weather for the race was clear, calm and sunny. Ninety-five birds from 20 lofts competed in the flight.

Twenty lofts and 331 birds flew in a Jasper-to-Victoria race July 5.

A pigeon owned by C. Woolley came home first in 23 hours, 59 minutes and 47 seconds.

Weeds Curtail Elk Swim

The marathon swim being staged by Saanich next month will be confined to Elk Lake because thick green weeds are choking the channel into Beaver Lake.

"It is growing in alarming proportions," said Coun. Edward Lum, one of the organizers of the Saanich Diamond Jubilee swim.

"I don't know what is causing it."

The swim was to have been between the concession on Beaver Lake and Hamsterley Beach on Elk Lake. Now, it will be confined to an equal distance in Elk Lake alone.

The race was to have been held July 1 but was postponed to Sunday, Aug. 14 because of poor weather.

Coun. Lum indicated he will bring up the matter at the Victoria and Saanich Beaches and Parks Committee.

"We have to find a way of clearing this weed," he said.

Man Slumped Behind Wheel Fined $300

John Stokkeland, 1656 Richardson, was fined $300 in central court Thursday when he pleaded guilty to driving while impaired.

Police found the accused slumped behind the wheel of his car on a parking lot June 30. In the car were a full bottle of liquor, a partly filled bottle and an empty one.

Stokkeland was also barred from driving for six months except weekdays during business hours.

Fund Still Short

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Three Universities Capital Development Fund is still $7,500,000 short of its $28,000,000 objective, a fund spokesman said Wednesday. The fund had hoped to fulfill its objective by the end of June, but "money is still coming in and coming in well," the spokesman said.

DECLARED OBSCENE

'Vindicates' Stand on Book

City Alderman Clyde Savage said Thursday a B.C. Appeal Court decision on an "obscene" American book vindicates the stand he took on it last summer in Victoria.

The court Wednesday in Vancouver upheld a previous ruling declaring the book, "Last Exit to Brooklyn," obscene under standards set by the Criminal Code of Canada.

Ald. Savage started the ball rolling in Victoria in August, 1965, when he stated he found the book "absolute filth" and demanded its removal from city bookstands.

A pharmacist, he found the book on the shelf of a city drugstore and declared he was appalled at its contents after reading a couple of pages.

The book, by Hubert Selby Jr., is a collection of seven short stories dealing with life in New York's Brooklyn slums.

A vast range of colorful language is used in descriptions of crime, violence, sex and degradation in the book.

In handing down the court's decision, Mr. Justice E. B. Bull stated the book is "a kaleidoscope of shocking forms of life in a harsh and cruel urban section, expressed and pictured in the language of the gutter."

The three-man court of appeal unanimously upheld an earlier ruling by county court judge S. J. Remnant. The case came before county court after police seized copies of the book at a downtown Vancouver bookstore.

The ruling was that the book was obscene under a Criminal Code section which defines an obscene publication as any work in which the dominant characteristic is the undue exploitation of sex.

Said Ald. Savage on learning of the court's decision: "It's nice to know I was right."

"I'm not in favor of banning books and suppression of books. I think everyone should have the right to read."

"But this book was not the right type to be sold across the counter. It was completely filthy."

Polisher Thief Pleads Guilty

A youth who stole a polishing machine from his landlord and sold it the same day for $30 pleaded guilty in central court today to possession of stolen goods.

Colwood RCMP testified that Richard Heimbecker of 729 Latoria Rd. took the electric car polisher, worth an estimated $75, Jan. 8 when he was living in a basement suite at 1944 Island Highway.

The accused, who has three previous convictions for theft, will be sentenced July 21 after Magistrate Ostler has studied a pre-sentence report.

Casting New Carr Play Set July 24

Greater Victoria Centennial Society is looking for actors and actresses.

Co-ordinator Jerry Gosley, who will produce Emily Carr — a Biography with Pictures, requires nine additional players for the cast of 11.

The play, which will run Oct. 26 to 29 at McPherson Playhouse, features Margaret Martin in the role of Emily, the noted B.C. artist and author. John Martin will play Eric Brown, first director of Canada's National Gallery, who greatly influenced Miss Carr.

Readings for local actors and actresses, who will be enrolled as unpaid volunteers, will be held by appointment starting Sunday, July 24, at 7 p.m. Those interested should phone 385-1455 or call at the Centennial Office, 14 Centennial Square.

The play was written by Herman Voaden and will be directed by Peter Manning.

MOD MUSIC FILLS SQUARE

The summer's second "Summer Holiday Bash" took place Thursday night in Centennial Square. The well attended concert featured the guitar stylings of Toronto's "Sean" as well as B.C.'s only Mod Trio — The Bakerloo Line.

An even bigger "Bash" is planned for next Thursday.

Moses Fired

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor John V. Lindsay has fired Robert Moses from his post as arterial highways co-ordinator, the only city position the controversial Moses held. Lindsay has been embroiled in a number of disputes with Moses, principally over the mayor's plan to consolidate the Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority, which Moses heads, and the city's transit authority.

Three Earn Grants For Advanced Study

Canada Council grants totaling $4,300 have been awarded to two University of Victoria assistant professors and a former Victoria College student for research this summer.

Grants of $1,500 each have gone to Dr. John Hayman of the English department and Dr. Lewis Tusken of the department of modern languages.

Dr. Hayman, who has taught at Uvic for the past five years, will study restoration literature at Oxford. He is on leave of absence.

Dr. Tusken, now in Bonn, will study Renaissance art criticism. An additional $1,300 has been awarded to Dr. Judith Dundas to study Renaissance art criticism.

A brilliant Victoria College student from 1944 to 1946, she is the daughter of the Hon. and Mrs. R. S. Dundas, 786 Island Road.

She will teach next year at the University of Michigan.

A research grant of $600 was turned down by Dr. John Ogelsby, who resigned from the university's history department last month.

Color TV Sept. 1

OTTAWA (CP) — Introduction of trial color television programs in Canada will begin Sept. 1, a month earlier than originally announced, State Secretary LaMarsh told the Commons Wednesday. She said the change was requested by broadcasting authorities and was due to quick advances made by both CBC and private stations.

CRITICS UNKIND

TORONTO (C.P.) — Like Father, Like Fun, a new Canadian comedy by Vancouver writer Eric Nicol, opened here Thursday night to applause of a capacity audience and reserved praise of local critics.

After two weeks of performances at Toronto's Royal Alexandra Theatre, the all-Canadian production moves to New York to prepare for its Sept. 8 opening at the Cort Theatre on Broadway.

The play centres around the farcical situation of a tycoon father anxious for his son to sow some wild oats, even to the point of purchasing the services of a female artist to teach the lad the bed manners to be expected of a mature man. Merbert Whitaker, critic for the Toronto Globe and Mail, suggests that some pruning of the text is necessary but feels that the play "has a lot of promise, in a disarmingly modest way."

He says, "Nicol's premise is attractive, even if some of the developments are not... There are some genuinely funny lines arising from the situation and much of the dialogue is amusing, even if some of it is the kind that has to be said with a wince."

Ron Evans of the Toronto Telegram liked the play but also had reservations.

Arthur Mayse

As a mere male, and kind of a timid one at that, I hesitate to take issue with the vigorous, earnest militant ladies of the BPWC. Those initials stand for the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, an outfit which, this week in Victoria, has popped off a number of resolutions.

Of these, the one that gives me pause demands that a federal royal commission be set up to investigate the status of women. This the BPWC feels could stand considerable improvement, indicating through a sternly-worded preamble that in Canada the woman remains a second-class citizen.

The charge comes as a surprise to me, since I have been under the impression that Emily Pankhurst and her suffragettes nailed women's right to the mast some 50 years ago.

As a matter of fact, determined women were making places for themselves in what is mistakenly alleged to be a man's world long before Emily began hacking policemen's shins.

Look at Florence Nightingale, Regard Mme. Marie Curie, and on the other side of the fence, contemplate Ann Bonney, the bloody-minded pirate vench.

Even without the BPWC to champion their rights, these women competed on equal terms with men. Were they, with the probable exception of Miss Bonney, second-class citizens?

There is another significant factor which the BPWC girls overlooked while talking up their resolution. It is known to many a baby-sitter and twice-a-week cleaning woman. Ask these which sex is the tyrant, and prepare for a grim account of bullying, meanness, penny-pinching and sharp practice.

By the man of the house? Oh no! The worst oppressors of women are other women.

A firm I once worked for drew its stenographers from a pool presided over by Miss X, a flinty little bit of a thing with a mint julep accent.

She daunted me, and one day after dictating a batch of story refusals to a cute kid who spelled by ear, I asked her what she thought of her boss.

The steno glanced over her shoulder. Then her nose quivered and her eyes filled.

"I shouldn't tell you this," she said, "but everyone in the steno pool calls her The Beast."

"Does this mean you'd sooner work for a man?" I asked, and drew another nose-quiver, accompanied by a stare of complete amazement.

"But of course!" she told me. "Who wouldn't!"

As with most rules, there are exceptions. It seems doubtful, though, that women will fully achieve the BPWC's hopes for them until they learn to get along better with each other.

Beyond these points, I strongly suspect that the resolution in question is at best a paper tiger. Back when Mrs. Pankhurst and her followers were chaining themselves to fence-pallings, a royal commission to enquire into women's status would have made sense.

But the once-dominant male has learned a lot since those now-distant days. He, the crafty rascal, no longer needs to be pummeled into yielding entry to his preserves.

Today, his prevailing attitude is, "If they want it, let 'em have it."

The surrender has bought men freedoms they never before enjoyed.

Except for a dedicated few, they can avoid such evening intrusions as the PTA meeting. No sweat... the women have everything in hand.

We are aware of the Marching Mothers, but who speaks of the marching fathers?

Who, in a majority of families, handles the finances and sees that the bills get paid?

Who comes home from a hard day at the office, cooks a dinner, puts in a wash, whips through a bout of housekeeping, keeps track of the kids, catches up on the mending, and celebrates her independence by helping pay off the mortgage?

What the BPWC should have asked for is a royal commission to enquire into the status of men... who, thanks to Emancipation, never had it so good!

Major Elevator Expansion Expected for West Coast

A complete investigation of the need for more grain handling and storage facilities on the West Coast is now under way, federal Agriculture Minister J. J. Greene said here today.

He also indicated the government still expects to buy some of the Central Saanich farms hit by the golden nematode infestation.

Mr. Greene was interviewed during a conference in the Legislative Buildings of the agriculture ministers from all provinces of Canada, except Prince Edward Island, hosted by B.C. Agriculture Minister Frank Richter.

"Our sales of 600 million bushels of wheat I think will become a permanent basis so handling the shipment of this grain has become a key situation," Mr. Greene said.

Woman Couldn't Park But Passed B.C. Test

An 87-year-old woman driver who missed a turn Thursday and ran over a curb, then almost ran over a dog and finally could not park properly, passed a driver exam and had her licence renewed only two months ago.

A city constable in a duty report today said he watched the elderly driver westbound on Simcoe, turn left too wide on to Rendall and run over the curb, then back into the intersection and proceed very slowly down the street.

Although moving at a crawl the driver almost hit a dog standing in the middle of the road before the policeman pulled her over.

When the officer asked her to park at the curb, she was unable to do so properly after several attempts.

A check revealed the woman had received her licence renewal after a test in May.

Response 'Wonderful' To Food Plea

The free food stall for Greater Victoria's poor opens again Saturday after a four-month closure.

The new manager of the stall, Mrs. Joan Price, said public response in food donations has been "wonderful."

But she added: "We can always do with more."

The number to call is 479-4870 to arrange for a pickup by volunteer drivers from the Victoria Labor Council.

Opening time is 10:30 a.m. at the Elks Hall on Cormorant Street. The stall provides free food for welfare recipients from public donations.

Admiral Maintains Stony Silence

Ottawa Indifference Frustrating; Adds to Confusion

By TERRY IZZARD
Marine Reporter

Rear-Admiral Michael G. Stirling was maintaining a stony silence today in the face of his rumored resignation.

While one admiral has been fired and two have handed in their resignations, the Pacific Coast commander refused to discuss the matter.

A service spokesman who was with the admiral late Thursday night when the crisis broke, said: "The admiral has decided not to say anything at this time."

However, it seems certain that along with the three other rear-admirals, the West Coast commander is all set to resign.

It has been obvious to men who work with the admiral that he has been unhappy for some time.

During one of his few confrontations with the press recently, he made it clear that relations with Ottawa were not all that could be desired.

Normally cool and in charge of the situation, the admiral seemed nervous and more than a little worried by some of the questions.

At one point, when asked about the advisability of retaining some of the navy's older vessels, the admiral stormed:

"I suppose if you had your way there wouldn't be a navy."

While the outburst seemed unwarranted, it became increasingly obvious as the question and answer period progressed, the admiral had good cause to be upset.

What at first seemed to be stalling tactics on his part—"I don't know the answer to that question"—turned out to be a genuine lack of knowledge.

For reasons better known to Ottawa, they have cloaked most matters pertaining to the navy's future in a veil of secrecy which even the top admirals have been unable to pierce.

With some 7,500 navy and civilian personnel on the Pacific Coast looking to him for guidance, the admiral has been in a most unenviable position.

He has even had to admit to close friends in the service that he doesn't know what the future holds in store for them.

Certainly his thoughts of retirement must have begun many months ago when he first realized that all was not as it should be.

How can a man—even a man with experience behind him that Admiral Stirling has—hope to run a show when his bosses keep him in the dark?

Since taking the hot seat at Esquimalt on Oct. 26, 1964, the Kelowna-born man has seen his active fleet dwindle from 13 to seven.

That will be the total complement by fall when three more of the four remaining ocean-esorts are placed in "hot reserve."

And one of the remaining seven is the training yacht Oriole which can hardly be classed as a fighting ship.

This paring of the fleet has posed the very real problem of possible lay-offs—another question which the admiral has been unable to shed any light on.

'SWIMMER' LOCATED IN ONTARIO

An Esquimalt resident missing for eight days has been located in Ontario.

Donald Dillon, 26, of 816 Dunsuir, told a friend July 6 he was going swimming near West Bay. Donald Vickery of the same address, with whom Mr. Dillon had been staying while he looked for a job, reported Dillon missing the next day.

Police said today they have received word that Dillon is now in Ontario. He had been employed at Brodie's Bakery Ltd. only two days before he went missing.

City Police Catch Escaper

A mental patient who escaped from Riverview Hospital at Esquimalt Wednesday was apprehended by Victoria police Thursday.

Russell Townsend, 35, had been reported as likely headed for the Victoria area. He was picked up by city police about 8 p.m. Thursday night.

On top of this, the 51-year-old admiral has had the added headache of integration which has meant a complete overhaul of day-to-day operations.

With people seeking answers on all sides, he has looked to Ottawa for guidance only to find that the support he expected was not forthcoming.

The general attitude of headquarters seems to have been: "Wait and see."

Possibly the boys in the East didn't know the answers

themselves — at times it appears even Defence Minister Hellyer didn't know what was going on.

Either way, it has led to frustration and confusion, for Admiral Stirling and his staff.

With the prospect of a comparatively cushy civilian job awaiting him, Admiral Stirling must be sorely tempted to throw in his chips with the boys on the other side of the fence.

If he does — and it seems fairly certain he will — there could be further resignations among the more senior officers with whom he has worked at Esquimalt.

Certainly it will be a big blow to the general morale of an already disillusioned navy.

After all, if an admiral can be so easily dispensed with, what hope is there for a less senior officer?

These are just some of the questions pricking an already sore thumb.

Unless a speedy remedy is forthcoming, the whole hand could well be amputated.

Tour Promoters 'Too Aggressive'

Causeway Clampdown Under Study

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

Victoria council is planning a crackdown on city tour promoters who get too aggressive on the Causeway.

Council members, the city manager and the city solicitor went into closed session in the alderman's lounge following Thursday's council meeting to discuss the touchy problem and lay the groundwork for their attack.

This morning Mayor A. W. Toone said many complaints are being received from tourists and Victorians regarding the hard-sell tour boosters.

"I must admit that I've been down there myself on two occasions and haven't found anything wrong," the mayor said. "But maybe I was there at the wrong times because we are certainly getting complaints."

ENFORCE BYLAW

Mayor Toone said council had decided to ask Chief J. F. Gregory to take a close look at city bylaws governing the distribution of pamphlets on city streets.

"We feel this would be a logical first step," he said. "We do have a bylaw governing the handing out of pamphlets which will later be thrown away and we are asking the police chief to take a close look at it and enforce the law."

Mayor Toone said council would also make a close study of the entire Causeway operation.

"I think the operators, too, should take a close look at the way their employees operate," he said.

"I think if they take a good look at their operations and govern themselves accordingly many of the problems could be eliminated."

It is understood that during the closed session council vetoed a request from a Vancouver-based company to operate more double-decker buses in the city.

BARBERS VOTING ON INCREASE

Barbers in Greater Victoria are considering an increase in the price of haircuts.

At a meeting of the union local Thursday night, it was decided a vote will be taken. Price of a haircut now is $1.75.

The vote should be completed by the end of this month.

No one will predict which way the vote may go.

Barbers on the lower mainland recently increased the price to $2 from $1.75.

Air Council Hits Phil's Criticism

The B.C. Aviation Council today made a curt but restrained response to Highway Minister Gagliardi's slam at small commercial airlines in B.C.

At the same time, Attorney General Robert Bonner said Mr. Gagliardi may have been misunderstood and that he really did not criticize the commercial operations.

Mr. Gagliardi had told reporters the government air fleet was necessary because he would not entrust the lives of employees flying into remote areas to private companies.

QUICKEST, SAFEST

"We feel flying is the quickest and safest method of travel in B.C. — no matter what size plane is used," Gordon Brown, general manager of the B.C. Aviation Council, told the Times.

"We also feel that, in view of the mountainous and bush conditions in this province, our B.C. pilots are among the most capable in the world."

"That's all we'd like to say for publication at present."

Mr. Bonner, who doubles as commercial transport minister, said licensing of pilots and planes is all done by the federal department of transport and not his department.

But he added that he had heard Mr. Gagliardi expound his views and "I don't think he was implying any incompetence or lack of safety on the part of charter companies."

"He was just pointing out that to use the various air charter firms in this province is to rely on equipment of varying standards and personnel of varying experience."

"But when you operate a provincial government service you at least have a uniform high standard of equipment and experience."

"It's not a reflection on the private field," said Mr. Bonner.

But Bill MacAdam, who operates the seven-aircraft Trans-Mountain Air Services in Campbell River, said he was "amazed and astounded" by the remarks.

"Our pilots have thousands and thousands of hours flying time on this coast, our planes are new and have dozens of safety features over those required by the DOT and we have a good safety record," he said.

THERE'S ALWAYS TOMORROW FOR MOONSTRUCK CROWD

They Go Hook, Line, Sinker for Breakwater

By GLEN ALLEN

Two thousand miles and 31 hours on the bus.

Just to see some local Izak Walton land a fingerling cod.

But Colin Chisolm, 14, here from Los Angeles and summering with relatives isn't complaining.

He's one of a whole moonstruck crowd who go hook-line and sinker for the Ogden Point breakwater.

"I just like sitting here," Colin said, just sitting there about half-way out the half-mile long, 50-year-old cement and granite pier.

"But I saw a guy out at the end get a nice one a couple of hours ago."

"They say they're taking worms," he added languidly dabbling his long and apparently baitless line over the edge.

Colin's uncle, Phil Cleaver of 932 Arundel, rather more vigorous in his approach, was winding up with a weighted, green, thick headline attached to a silver spinner and throwing it a good stone's throw in to shore.

"I'll never get anything with this rig," he said.

"You've got to fish the outside," said Mr. Cleaver, who said he had not always gone fishless on the breakwater.

"Tonight it's jammed with weeds and you can't get a line through."

One-night this week there were about 30 or 40 anglers packing, fretting, spinning, casting, bobbing and watching over the insurmountable and sometimes implacably fishless depths off Ogden Point.

Some come, some go. It's nice when the stone is still warm from the sun. It's even nicer just when night starts to fall and a graceful boat like the Coho cuts across the sunset.

Some hardy anglers stay till the sun is long gone.

Peter Medwid, 748 Parkridge, who shows great casting style and makes his own lures out of white cloth and silver paper, says he's stayed to midnight and not been the last to leave.

He and the others are fishing for rock cod, rock bass and red snapper.

If they get nothing more than a little Juan de Fuca ague, there's always tomorrow.

Just one creelful was noted going home to a waiting frying pan Wednesday.

There were three fish; small but proudly borne.

They were part of a procession. There was the father carrying the rod, the son with the box, the daughter with a gaff (not needed).

Then there was a lady, the mother, carrying the three trophies.

Well, why not? She caught them.

ALLEN-BROWN

Make Home in North

Following a honeymoon trip touring the provincial interior, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dennis Allen are now making their home in Prince George.

The bride, the former Frances Pauline Brown, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown, 532 Paradise Street, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Peter D. Allen, 868 Parklands Drive.

Baskets of stocks, daisies and gladioli in pink and white tones decorated Queen of Peace Church for the double-ring service at which Fr. M. J. McNamara officiated. Mr. Brown gave his daughter in marriage.

During the ceremony, "Ave Maria" was sung by soloists, the Misses Patricia Malenfant and Patricia Lynch. Organist was Mrs. A. Smith.

GOWN OF LACE

Chantilly lace formed the waist-length gown worn by the bride. The bodice featured a scalloped sash neckline and sleeves ending in lily points. The skirt was styled with full pleated back, extending from a row of tiny, bridled buttons. A floral headpiece, trimmed with pearl droplets, held her four-tiered veil of illusion net and she carried a bouquet of red roses and stephanotis. Her only jewelry was a culture pearl pendant necklace and earrings.

Matching gowns of aqua satin organza were worn by the bride's attendants; matron of honor Mrs. B. Worobey, and bridesmaids, the Misses Louise Lapointe, Vancouver, and Patti Johnson. Accenting the outfits were floral headpieces en tone and bouquets of aqua-tinted carnations and white roses. Jewelry was the bride's gifts of pearl pendants.

Jack Somerville was best man. Guests were ushered to pews marked with pink, white and aqua daisies by Robert Worobey and James Beattie.

Wilfred Lapointe proposed the toast to his niece at the reception following in the Union Centre. White doves holding wedding rings topped the three-tier wedding cake which centred the head table.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Allen chose a three-piece suit in soft pink tones, trimmed at the neckline with re-embroidered silk ribbon. She accented the outfit with white accessories and corsage of Rapture roses and white carnations.

Miss Geneva Lent, artist in law and noted historian, claims "I have researcher's luck." Since coming to Victoria 10 years ago from her native Calgary, "I have found a treasure trove right here."

NOTED PAINTER, WRITER ...

TELLS WORLD OF 'CANADIANA'

By PENNY MURPHY

"Canadianism is too solid to lose," claims Miss Geneva Lent, an exponent of "Canadiana."

The internationally-known historian uses her talents, writing and painting, to create a general interest in Canada and other countries in Canadian history of arts and crafts.

"As Canadians, we have identity. We have a culture," says Miss Lent, who has spent her life "digging" in libraries, archives and museums, searching "for bridges to fill gaps between the provinces and the people."

"People are 'Canadians' conscious; 'Canadiana' is fashionable," states the historian.

"Young people are hungry for Canadian literature," and in art, "it is the approach of stark realism. We have grown past the abstract. You can tell technique and sincerity," says the artist and writer.

On June 20, an exhibition of Geneva Lent's large paintings of Canadian Indian life, arts and crafts opened at the Banff School of Fine Arts, which "will create something of international interest in our live Canadian heritage and identity in our native arts."

Miss Lent attempts to tell a story in her paintings, as well as to depict the traits and customs of the ethnic group she is portraying. She explains one painting, one of her works on Eskimo life, as showing, step by step, how igloos are made.

Her paintings are done through research, "study with depth, intensity — with purpose, with a trained and disciplined mind."

The artist stresses "exactitude and awareness of circumstances," and as a result, meticulous research goes into each of her projects.

"I recall doing a painting of the clothing worn by a particular tribe of Indians. In the foreground was an exaggerated war bonnet. I couldn't get the exact curve of the bonnet and its structure."

Miss Lent said that she left her painting to do research, to learn how the tribe constructed their head dresses, right down to the smallest details of how the Indian captured the eagle, plucked the feathers, shaved part of the shaft, and attached it to the bonnet.

FLEXIBLE MEDIUM

Because of this constant referral, "I choose a medium which I can leave, and then come back to."

Recalling the 20 years' research that went into her book, "West of the Mountains," a study of Western Canadian history published in 1962 under a Ford Foundation Grant, Geneva Lent says, "Research is a luxury and an expense."

"I remember having to wait an hour and a half in Billingsgate, (a fish market in London, England), in a taxi, with the meter ticking, while en route to the Hudson's Bay Company Archives."

Most of the research for her history was done in the British Museum and the Hudson's Bay Company Archives. A distinct honor, Geneva Lent was nominated as a member of the Hudson's Bay Records Society, and now has immediate access to the complete records.

She says: "Research never restricts in depth or conscientiousness. It is always

DEAR ABBY ...

Girl Deserving
Of a Fair Break

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 24 and, having been going with a girl my age for three years, I feel her a line only to keep her interested and now I am sorry because she thinks I am in love with her and will eventually marry her. She doesn't date anyone but me and she gets jealous if I look at another girl or want to spend an evening with my buddies.

I enjoy her company, but I am not in love with her and never could be. How can I get out of her clutches without losing her completely? She comes in handy on a rainy Sunday afternoon.

TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: Do the girl a favor and level with her, but spare her the painful details. Tell her marriage is not on your mind. Then quit dallying her, and get some good books for those rainy Sunday afternoons. It's high time you turned over a new leaf, Romeo.

DEAR ABBY: I am a professional soldier now serving in Germany. I have a wonderful wife and four children. I am due for a rotation back home next month. I recently received my assignment which is one very solid dream about but very few get.

I was thrilled and wrote my wife about the lucky break. She wrote back saying if I wanted to move I could go without her and the children as she wasn't moving there. I don't think this is fair to me. Should I try to get my assignment changed, or go there without her? I think I deserve more than an empty home to come home to.

LOST

DEAR LOST: So do I, but don't try to fight the battle of the home front at such a distance — wait until you get home. In the meantime, ask your chaplain for a few pointers on how to make a wife face up to her responsibilities before you bring up the heavy artillery.

DEAR ABBY: My sister recently divorced her husband after 18 years of marriage.

What does that make her — ex-husband to my children? It just burns me up to hear them calling him "Uncle Bill." And he still refers to them as his nieces and nephews. Will you please print this and set a lot of people straight?

DEAR BURNED: Your sister's former husband is now a former uncle to your children. Slimmer down — it's probably more due to habit than malice.

DEAR ABBY: Apropos people who bore their guests to death with tales of their trips, and add to it, endless hours of slides, may I share a wonderful suggestion given to me by a very wise drama professor at U.S.C.?

To test the interest of your audience, deliberately stop in the middle of a sentence, and if no one says, "... and then what happened?" Shut up! I have tried it many times over the years, and each time I had to shut up.

Parties for Miss Byers

Bride-elect Miss Gail Byers, whose marriage to Colin Bowen takes place this Saturday, has been widely feted with parties and gifts.

An arrangement of yellow marguerites and white Esther Reed daisies centred the refreshment table when Mrs. R. H. Byers entertained at a trousseau tea in honor of her daughter in her Kathleen Street home. Among the 40 guests who attended were the groom's mother and sister, Mrs. Anne Bowen and Miss Deirdre Bowen of Pincher Creek, Alta. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. J. J. Young, and Mrs. B. Bowles presided at the refreshment table.

Mrs. M. Hanlon and Mrs. A. G. Turner were co-hostesses at a shower in the Rose Hill Road home of the former. The bride-elect was presented with a pottery vase of yellow roses, and her mother and grandmother received pink rose corsages.

Gifts presented by the 11 guests were concealed in a decorated laundry basket.

A coffee party honoring Miss Byers was held in the Tattersall Drive home of Mrs. B. Bowles. A hobbail glass dessert set was presented from the 17 guests. Each guest brought a dessert recipe and an item to be used in the recipe.

WHY GROW OLD?

Nurse's Aid Needs Diet For Night Shift Workers

Q. I read your column faithfully and envy all of those people who can go along with you about dieting and lose so much weight. I'm very much overweight, and I'd like to lose 50 pounds at least.

Here is my problem. I'm a widow with children, and I work the 11 to 7 night shift as a nurse's aid. I eat constantly night and day when I am awake. Could you please map out something for us night people for a diet? I have to cook breakfast and supper for my children and of course I eat then. I also eat at work. Please answer in the paper and maybe some other night people could get this too.

A. I don't see why this reader has such a problem unless it is that she is actually eating four meals instead of three during each 24 hours and may be snacking in between times. She doesn't mention lunch. I suppose she must sleep while the children are at school. I can see why it would be profitable and pleasant to break the long night with some food.

Why not eat a good breakfast and then sleep? Upon awakening do not eat a real meal. Have some skim milk or fresh fruit and wait for supper. Then eat the third meal during the night. This seems the best plan since lunch and dinner would be too close together if you get enough daytime sleep.

Q. I have a skin disease for which the doctors say there is no cure. It causes a change in the pigmentation of the skin. Please tell me if there is any makeup that can be used to disguise these ugly white spots on my arms. They are even worse in the summer when the rest of my skin gets tanned.

A. Yes, there are such products. In fact, one well known one was first produced to cover purple birthmarks. If you or any of my readers would like to have the names of some of these, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Daughter Home

Miss Jean Tsai arrived in Victoria Monday from Germany, where she has been studying music for the past three years. She is visiting in the Oakdowne Avenue home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Luke Tsai. Before going to Germany, Miss Tsai studied piano for five years in London, England. She will return to Germany to continue her studies in October.

Tasty Treats Galore Found in This Store

By Penny Saver

Usually on the day that our family demands a hot, "gooey" dessert, I have nothing planned. On the other hand, on the day that there is a fantastic meal-topper prepared, the dinner table is quickly evacuated because of a ball game or some other activity. Now, instead of playing a game of chance, I have my cupboard stocked with a new dessert idea that is so easy to prepare. I simply ask everyone what the evening plans are, and if these are not too pressing, I pop this dessert into the oven to bake while we eat.

The food is a sponge pudding mix. One package, selling for 39 cents, contains two envelopes. One is the sponge pudding mix, and the other contains the sauce. To make this mouth-watering treat, add water to the sponge pudding mix and stir. Put this mixture into a casserole dish. Sprinkle the contents of the sauce mix on top, without stirring. Add water again, and do not stir. Place it in the oven and bake for approximately 30 minutes.

When you take it out of the oven, the sponge pudding part has risen, and the sauce has combined with water, and is under the pudding. At some time during the baking period, all the contents seem to switch places! It's delicious served hot, and comes in flavors including lemon, caramel and chocolate.

I found a new food for the latest addition to our household, a Siamese kitten that was smuggled to Victoria on board a jet. (Not even the stewardess knew!)

This food is in the dry form, and can be served to your cat either dry or with water. By adding water, you unlock the true fish flavor of this fish and meal combination. Simply add two parts water to one part of the food.

Selling for 59 cents a box, each individual bite-size morsel is shaped like a fish. It contains vitamins and minerals that your cat needs for a well-balanced diet, as well as fish oils and healthy meal. Get some today. Your cat will love it.

Give every member of your household a treat. Give Penny a call at 382-3131. She'll tell you where she found these.

Style's Hair-Raising Tale

NEW YORK (AP) — To be absolutely sure there is no confusion in separating the men from the women, Kenneth is advocating waist-long hairdos.

Since Kenneth Battelle as Jacqueline Kennedy's hairdresser once influenced a world of women into teasing their tresses into a huge head of hair, he may get his point across. But if you can't grow that much, can't wash it, or flip a disc trying to comb it, you can buy it and tuck the root of it into the crown of your hair.

Called "falls," these spare hair parts have been gaining in popularity and in length during the year. But Kenneth probably has the record for the longest, 36 inches of silky stuff that costs about $750.

Selling by the foot are braids that dangle the length of the body, or pull through hair loops, or form masses of intricate ins and outs at the nape of the neck.

Realize $185

The sum of $185 was realized when the Sooke Old Age Pensioners staged a concert and contest in the Sooke Community Hall. The money will go towards a housing project for the elderly in Sooke.

A busload of 32 Victoria pensioners and several carloads travelled to Sooke for the event where Frank Anders and his group from Victoria entertained all who attended with comic recitations, songs and instrumental numbers.

Park Money Bylaw Slated

DUNCAN — City council hopes to present a money bylaw later this year to finance the building of a centennial field house at Wharfedale Park.

Estimated cost is $30,000. But Mayor Jack Dobson said today the bylaw might also make financial provision for the preparation of playing fields in the park.

Councillors met Wednesday with Alan Hodgson, Vancouver architect who is designing the field house.

Mr. Hodgson, who has almost completed the working drawings, was instructed to prepare the project for tender.

Mayor Dobson said: "We want to get a complete breakdown of costs in the hope we can consolidate the financing of the field house and playing fields in one bylaw."

"If we get the bylaw passed later this year it's possible we can take advantage of the

UNDERGOING SEA TRIALS off Victoria is the new CPR freight-trailer ferry, Traller Princess. The 328-foot former U.S. tank carrier will go into service shortly between Sidney-Nanaimo and Vancouver. For the past year, the former carrier has been undergoing a complete structural change at McKay Cormack shipyards, Victoria. When operational, the 20-year-old craft will carry 25 trailers or 20 freight cars. At present, CPR's large fleet of trailers are transported aboard B.C. Ferries. The Traller Princess will be powered by twin 900-horsepower engines which have been completely overhauled during her refit. (Times Photo)

500 TO BEND BOWS AT CHAMPIONSHIPS

COURTENAY — Some 500 archers are expected here at the weekend for the Pacific Northwest Archery championships.

Those taking part will come from as far as Alberta, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana to defend their titles.

Highlights of the three day shoot will be Gene Cowan's attempt to defend his men's open championship which the Portland man set in Boise, Idaho, last year.

The event has been officially billed as a centennial attraction.

Car Racing Ban 'Selfish' Move

A zoning bylaw prohibiting auto races at Sandown Park was strongly criticised Thursday by the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association at a North Saanich public hearing.

The bylaw dealing with all aspects of land use is the first major piece of legislation drawn up by council since North Saanich was incorporated as a municipality almost a year ago.

Bob Lowe, spokesman for VITRA, described the bylaw as a "most selfish piece of legislation" as it made no provisions for recreational facilities.

"I feel opposition to auto races is mainly based on ignorance," he said. "It is being opposed by a minority who do not know that our aim is to provide recreation for youth."

He failed to see how some residents could oppose auto races on the grounds of noise nuisance.

AIRPORT, HIGHWAY

He pointed out the track on one side was bounded by the airport and on the other by a main highway.

VITRA planned to build a ½-mile paved oval inside the horse track and construct extra bleachers and lighting.

But strong opposition was voiced by nearby residents.

"We don't want auto races and all the things that go with it," said Joseph Saville, a John Road farmer.

Apartment from the noise nuisance, he said, auto races would call for extra policing.

He was supported by residents who urged VITRA to establish the track in a strictly rural area where there is no danger of urban and residential encroachments.

The meeting was attended by

McKELVIE BRIDGE UP BY SEPTEMBER

COURTENAY — Lance Brazier, who has been running a one-man campaign to have an old wooden bridge replaced on McKelvie Road, was assured by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Thursday that the bridge would be up by September.

Mr. Campbell said a new bridge has been included in this year's estimates.

Wrong 'Hand' Given Policeman By Businessman

COURTENAY — There's nothing wrong in giving a hand to a policeman.

As long as it's a helping hand. When it's the sort of hand that helps a policeman out of the door in a none-too-gentle manner, it leads to court, as Wallace Leighton found out on Thursday.

Leighton was convicted of assaulting a police officer when the officer visited his business premises to serve a warrant. The accused said he was under strain at the time and apologized for the offence.

This is only half the story...

the other half begins in vineyards uniquely favored by soil and climate, where the Andres' vines of old world heritage, French Columbar, Golden Chasselas and Johannesburg Riesling are tended by master vintagers.

After careful pressing of the choicest grapes, the new-born wine is deposited in oaken casks to age and mellow naturally. Every unhurried step, from the ripening of the grapes to the final bottling, is attended by experts who are dedicated to producing fine wine.

This is the half of the story most people never know, but without it, there couldn't be a happy ending.

Aristocrat Set for Tour

An aristocrat in the hierarchy of railroading will play a prominent role in the British Columbia centennial celebrations.

The historical locomotive Dunrobin and its ornate "saloon" coach will make a tour of British Columbia under the auspices of the Canadian Committee of British Columbia before being enshrined at Fort Steele in Cranbrook.

The locomotive was named after Dunrobin Castle in Scotland, the ancestral seat of the fourth Duke of Sutherland. Built in 1894 it was operated for the private pleasure of the Duke on the tracks of the Highland Railway Co., between Inverness and Golspie, in Northern Scotland, where he had a private station near the castle.

The tour of the Dunrobin will start at New Westminster, July 13. V.I. dates will be set later. On the footplate of the engine cab is space reserved for honored guests, many of whose autographs are still there. Four monarchs who handled the controls of Dunrobin were King Edward VII, King George V, King George VI, and King Alfonso of Spain.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Ronnie Hamm, age 13, of Florence, S.C., for his question:

What kind of animal is an armadillo?

The armadillo looks for all the world like a living mechanical toy. The Spaniards named him with a word that means the little armor-plated one. But though he looks somewhat like a small warrior, his character is far from warlike, for he is a gentle creature.

The various armadillos are natives of the New World. They enjoy life in semi-deserts and regions of arid grassland, and most of them make their homes in Central and South America. The biggest is about four feet long from his pointed nose to the tip of his long tail. All armadillos are armor-plated with scaly skins and look somewhat like a small robot tank. The fairy armadillo is a seven-inch cutie with a rosy pink shell.

You might never guess that an armor-plated armadillo is a warm-blooded, warm-hearted mammal. Mammals are supposed to have hair, and this fellow has a coat of horny plates made of tough material somewhat like the shell of a turtle. His hard plates, however, actually are a modified form of fur. He is a warm-blooded animal, but his thermostat does not work too well and his body temperature tends to rise and fall with the weather.

The true test of a mammal is in the family life. Mrs. Armadillo gives birth to a litter of four babies and feeds them on mother's milk. The baby mammals in the litter may be four boys or four girls, but the quads are never mixed. The youngsters have soft shells and dents to show where the future plates will form. Mama tends and educates them with loving care and they follow her like little piglets.

Feeds on Insects

Armadillos are ant eaters of the Edentata order. This work means toothless—and most ant-eating edentates have no teeth. An armadillo, however, may have 20 to 30 little peg teeth in his jaws. He is a devourer of ants, termites and other bugs and most of his foraging is done after dark. By devouring termites and root-eating insects, he is a great blessing to the plant world.

The hard claws on his stumpy feet are meant for digging and the armadillo is a great digger of burrows. There he spends most of the day and there the babies are born in a grass-lined nest. Though he looks like an armor-plated tank, this desert-dwelling ant-eater is a gentle character who would rather run away than fight.

The tough coat is meant to protect the armadillo from his surroundings. He often shares his world with cactuses and his armor protects him from prickles and thorny bushes. As a rule he has bands of larger plates around his middle. The nine-banded armadillo is found in Texas, but all his cousins live south of the border. The three-banded armadillo can protect himself from his meat-eating foes by rolling his body into a ball.

Doctors Operated And Found Nothing

By WALTER C. ALVAREZ

I just happened to run onto some old notes I made some years ago on the many cases I saw in which a person who had just gone through some very painful emotional experience had promptly developed a stomach ulcer or a duodenal ulcer, or had just vomited blood.

I have seen many cases in which a person who vomited blood shortly after experiencing some violent emotion had no sign of an ulcer. When examined with X-rays, nothing abnormal could be seen.

In many cases the man was so sure he had an ulcer that he got himself operated on and when his abdomen was opened, nothing wrong was found. In one case in which a physician had himself operated on a day or so after he had vomited blood, the surgeon found no ulcer but a swollen patch as big as a quarter.

When we examined this under a microscope, we could see blood going through the wall of the duodenum (bowel just outside the stomach) just as it might go through a towel.

A physician friend of mine, got so upset nervously that he promptly vomited much blood. He immediately had himself operated on and no ulcer was found.

Later, when the doctor's case came to trial and again he became terribly upset, he vomited blood again. Much against any advice, he had his abdomen explored and again nothing wrong was found. Recently I saw a friend who one morning vomited a lot of blood. When I saw him, I just said, "Bill, what happened yesterday?" And tears came to his eyes. He said that the day before, his boss had said, "Today you are 65 and so I am dismissing you." When Bill asked, "Do I get a pension?" The boss told him that he would not. Bill recovered soon afterward, when I helped him find a new position.

A man of 50 who had just vomited blood told me that the day before his old book-keeper had confessed that for years she, to please my patient's brother-in-law, business partner and closest friend, had been rigging the books so that the partner could steal much money. My patient was so floored by this discovery that he lay awake all night in great mental distress.

Another man who had vomited much blood told me that the day before, a strike in his factory had flared into great violence and this had distressed him terribly. Many years ago, a physician bought himself an X-ray apparatus for looking at stomachs. He tried it out on a patient, and then to his horror he found that he had used a current 20 times stronger than he should have used. After lying awake almost all night fearing that he had burned the woman's skin, he waked to find himself almost paralyzed because of the pain of a very severe ulcer that had formed in his duodenum.

Actually, he hadn't given the woman enough X-ray exposure to do her any harm. When he found this out, he got well.

Magistrate Rules Out Evidence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Evidence on early samples taken from Mrs. Esther Castellani's body were ruled inadmissible here Thursday at the preliminary hearing into a capital murder charge against Rene Castellani, 40.

Castellani, a former radio station promotion man, is charged in connection with the July 11, 1965, death of his wife. A coroner's jury ruled she died of arsenic poisoning.

Magistrate James Barfman agreed Thursday with defence lawyer Albert Mackoff's plea that the samples were tampered with between the time they left the hospital where Mrs. Castellani died and the time of their arrival in the city analyst's office.

The court heard other testimony, from Dr. Harold Ernest Taylor, a pathologist, that Mrs. Castellani was given arsenic for at least five months before her death. He said he based his conclusions on tests completed here and in Toronto after the body was exhumed.

Dr. Taylor also said that findings from an earlier autopsy authorized by Rene Castellani were compatible with arsenic poisoning, as were Mrs. Castellani's medical chart and her doctor's diagnosis.

He said arsenic was found in the woman's liver, heart, nails and hair, "in evidence she did indeed die from arsenic poisoning."

Man Pulled Knife On Victim

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Thursday Mrs. Anna Whitby was threatened by a man with a knife before she was slain a week ago in a secluded "lovers' lane" in suburban Coquitlam.

They said the knife — a common kitchen paring knife with a 3½-inch blade — was found on the ground near the scene of the murder.

The nude body of Mrs. Whitby was found last Friday after the victim's six-year-old son, Murray, was discovered wandering in the dead-end lane.

Mrs. Whitby, 28, from nearby Port Moody, had gone to the lane to picnic and polish her car. She was strangled with her own slacks.

RCMP investigators said Thursday they were told by Murray that a man came out of the bush with a knife and threatened his mother.

"After some conversation with Mrs. Whitby, he pulled a knife on her which he used to threaten her to force her away from the car toward the edge of the bush area where he subsequently assaulted her," an RCMP statement said.

Radical Sect Members Jailed

MOSCOW (AP) — Three Fundamental Christians in the Ukraine have been given five-year prison sentences on charges of causing psychological and physical harm to other members of their church.

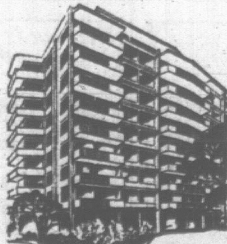

Pravda, Ukrainian (Ukrainian Pravda) reported that P. Zaychenko, V. Borbunovich and A. Yakimenko were convicted in Nikolayev, on the Black Sea.

The paper said they "called themselves Christians of evangelical belief, but the main purpose of their sect is to divert the Soviet people from participating in Soviet life."

"They do not read newspapers, go to the cinema or watch television."

"They injured their co-religionists, making them physically and psychologically unsound."

STORM COULD DELAY GEMINI 10 LAUNCHING

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Space officials said today that tropical storm Celia could force postponement of Monday's planned launching of Gemini 10 astronauts John Young and Michael Collins if the storm continues on its present course. The U.S. space agency said the small storm, now about 800 miles southeast of the cape, failed to turn northward as expected and was bearing down on a westerly track that would bring it to this area late Sunday or Monday.

NATIONAL GUARD SUMMONED

Chicago Riot Tempo Grows

OFFICER SHOT TO DEATH CHECKING CAR

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—One policeman was killed and another seriously wounded when they stopped an auto during a routine patrol in south Philadelphia today.

Other policemen converged on the area and threw up a dragnet for three men seen fleeing on foot.

At least one man was arrested when he climbed to a roof and then jumped and officers caught him.

Lieut. James Agnew said the shooting occurred when patrolmen Michael Robinson and George Jacobs stopped an auto, "either for a traffic violation or because they were suspicious of it."

CHICAGO (AP)—The Illinois national guard was called out today for the second time in less than a year as three nights of rioting brought exchanges of gunfire between police and snipers with the disturbances spilling over into daylight looting.

In Thursday night's demonstrations 900 policemen ranged through the area and exchanged gunfire with rioters.

Two Negroes were shot and killed, six policemen including a captain were shot and more than 300 persons were arrested. Many civilians also were wounded.

Some rioting and looting continued in the daylight hours for the first time today, but police reinforcements moved in and blocked off streets. Some police units called for more ammunition, but there was no gunfire after daylight.

The exchange of gunfire between police and demonstrators was the first in a major U.S. city since 34 persons were slain in California during the Watts racial riots last August.

Governor Otto Kerner ordered 3,000 guardsmen from 15 Chicago units of the Illinois national guard to the scene at the request of Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago.

They will back up some 900 policemen who have been assigned to the area.

Policemen began carrying machine-guns, shotguns, rifles and tear gas Thursday night in addition to pistols and night sticks to combat roving bands of vandals, looters and snipers.

The Chicago Transit Authority shut down bus and elevated train service in the area and police continued to patrol the area.

Strike Hits Montreal Hospitals

MONTREAL (CP)—The non-professional staffs of seven Montreal hospitals went on strike at 7 a.m. today, as scheduled, at the opening of a strike of 21 hospitals across Quebec.

Pickets set up lines shortly after the strike deadline.

A union spokesman said 7,000 workers were out, 3,000 of them in the Montreal area.

Raymond Couture, C.N.T.U. strike director, said today a further 16 hospitals would be struck-bound at 7 a.m. Saturday. He did not say which hospitals would be affected.

Last-ditch talks aimed at averting the walkout apparently failed. Mediation between the Quebec Hospital Association and the National Federation of Services (C.N.T.U.) was carried on throughout the night in a downtown hotel.

The seven hospitals represent about 4,500 beds.

Two hospitals in Sherbrooke were reported being picketed.

Further negotiations were rescheduled to begin shortly after 8 a.m. Reached at his hotel room by telephone, Paul-Emile Olivier, leader of the hospital association's negotiating committee, would make little comment.

"I can't say much at this time," he said. However, today should be a very good day for negotiations.

"Always, we have to be optimistic. We've made some progress in the last two days. But I can't say any more."

One Admiral Fired, 3 to Quit In Defence Integration Crisis

Landymore Refused To Resign

By JACK BRAYLEY
HALIFAX (CP)—Rear-Admiral William Landymore, sea operations chief and Canada's No. 1 operational sailor, said today he has been fired after he refused to resign "and it's only a matter of deciding the date of my departure."

The admiral, on leave at his nearby Lawrenceton farm, thus confirmed an Ottawa report about his status. He said his dispute with Defence Minister Hellyer is over the armed forces unification program.

"Integration" wasn't the issue even though it was proving to be more "expensive," he said. His own command administration costs have tripled under the program. This had made things difficult but "we were trying to make it work."

The issue was the destruction of the navy's identity through a common rank structure with the other armed forces and a single uniform "without any apparent economy or efficiency."

As far as the single uniform went it merely indicated an expenditure "for another 100,000 uniforms." This didn't seem to affect the economy.

SAW PEARSON
The admiral said that in pressing his point he had an informal conversation with Prime Minister Pearson after he was dismissed.

Commenting on departures and rumors of departures from the high command and defence quarters, Admiral Landymore said there had been no "collusion." Many high-ranking officers had been in Ottawa to attend a dinner for the retiring defence chief, Air Chief Marshal Frank R. Miller, and "I was shocked to find that we had all come independently to the same conclusion about the program as it affected our identity as a service."

There was absolutely "no ganging up," the admiral added with an emphatic shake of his head. There were "no grapes" involved because of the leap-frog promotion of Commodore Ralph Hennessey over the heads of senior admirals to the rank of vice-admiral.

"In fact," Admiral Landymore said, "we had all made our appeals to the minister and decisions had been made before Admiral Hennessey's appointment."

His own critical talk with the minister took place Thursday, June 23.

The admiral, informal in slack and open-neck shirt after some early-morning exercise in one of his hay fields, said: "It's as simple as this: I can't see where any efficiency or economy is involved in taking away the navy's identity."

VIEW 'UNPALATABLE'
He said he had come to this decision in support of the officers in his own command who found the "unification" prospect "very unpalatable."

"What does the minister expect to gain by destroying our identity?" the admiral asked with a shrug. "His motives may be good politics but there is no."

Hellyer Policy Under Attack

OTTAWA (CP)—Unification of the armed forces into a one-uniform, common-rank service exploded today into a public dispute involving Defence Minister Hellyer and Rear-Admiral Landymore, who said he has been fired.

Three other rear-admirals also were reported on their way out of the services. Naval sources said actions of the four were coincidental and not a planned attack on integration of command or unification of the services.

Rear-Admiral Landymore, 50, chief of Maritime Command and of the Atlantic fleet, said he was fired after refusing to resign.

Rear-Admirals Robert Welland, 48, deputy chief of operations at Canadian Forces Headquarters here, and H. C. Burchell, 54, of Ottawa, confirmed they had asked for early retirement.

Rear-Admiral M. G. Stirling, 51, of Esquimalt, B.C., deputy commander of Maritime Command and commander of the Pacific fleet, was also reported to have asked to be retired before reaching the compulsory retirement age of 55. (See page 19.)

Rear-Admiral Burchell said he fully supports integration policies but holds a different view from Mr. Hellyer on how they should be implemented.

One source said Rear-Admiral Burchell was concerned over economies in technical services which might risk lack of technical and logistic support for the operational forces.

Meanwhile, Mr. Hellyer was on a tour of Western Canada but said in London, Ont., shortly after reports of the departures that he had received no resignations.

(Meanwhile, it was reported in Ottawa that a hush hush committee of top naval men have compiled a report for the parliamentary defence committee. They will ask for a royal commission probe of the armed forces and the impact of integration of the services.)

The appeal for a royal commission will be presented to Prime Minister Pearson from a joint committee of the Navy League of Canada; the Naval Officers Association of Canada and the Royal Canadian Naval Association. The committee was named June 20 to prepare a brief for the Commons committee on defence.)

The former Conservative defence minister, Douglas Harkness, said here a considerable number of military officers have been asked to pledge personal loyalty to Mr. Hellyer.

They were told that if they were not prepared to give such a pledge they would never be promoted and might as well quit, he said.

Civil Control Main Issue

EDMONTON (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer said today the central issue in his disagreement with four senior naval officers over armed forces integration policy is civil control of the military.

The minister told an airport press conference on his arrival to fill a speaking engagement that it is a question, "whether a minister can set policy or a small group of military can dictate policy."

Mr. Hellyer denied a statement by Douglas Harkness, former Progressive Conservative Defence Minister, that he had demanded a pledge of personal loyalty from senior officers of the forces.

"I have never in my life asked an officer for a loyalty oath," the minister said.

Terror-Stricken Survivor Heard Eight Muffled Cries

CHICAGO (UPI)—Each of the eight murdered Chicago student nurses let out a "muffled loud cry" as she was slain, the lone survivor of the massacre told police today.

From her hospital bed, Corazon Amurao, told police of the death cries of the eight young women who were strangled and stabbed to death, one by one, by a tall young killer in their townhouse apartment Thursday.

Michael Spiotto, deputy chief of detectives, said Miss Amurao told him she heard the cries as the killer led his bound victims from the bedroom where he held them captive. Miss Amurao, an exchange student from the Philippines, saved herself by rolling underneath a bed while the killer's back was turned.

The mass slayer took his victims from the bedroom one by one. In every case, Miss Amurao said, she heard "a little scream—more like a muffled loud cry" a moment later.

One of the mysteries of the massacre—called by one Chicago official "the crime of the century"—was why no one in the quiet far south side neighborhood heard the girls as they were systematically slaughtered.

TWO HOURS
Spiotto and a police artist talked to the young nurse for two hours in the South Chicago community hospital where she is staying under a security guard.

Spiotto emphasized he had not tried to make Miss Amurao "relive" her harrowing experience. The main purpose of the session was to get a more detailed description of the killer, he said.

Spiotto said he showed the Philippine girl 180 photographs of sexual offenders and she picked out four or five which she said resembled the slayer.

"The details are now more defined," Spiotto told reporters. "There are a few individuals who are more likely than others. We got more information about the description of the man—the shape of his nose, eyebrows."

FIND KILLER
He said he was "quite hopeful" the killer would be found.

Albert S. Daniel, executive director of South Chicago Community Hospital, was asked whether the killer could have

'Mile Up and Something Wet Nuzzled Leg'

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI)—The Swiss Globe Airlines plane was flying a mile above the Belgian countryside early today when Capt. Paul Wuhman felt something warm and wet nuzzling his leg.

One look at his visitor in the cockpit was enough for Wuhman. He grabbed for his radio and called Brussels on the international emergency frequency.

"Brussels, Brussels, can I make an emergency landing? I have three lions in my cockpit."

Thinking it was a joke, the control tower responded: "Just stick them in your gas tank."

Frantically, Wuhman tried to convince the tower there really were three lions in the cockpit. When he put the radio microphone near one of the lions and broadcast the growl he was given permission to make the emergency landing.

The plane, under charter to West Germany's Lufthansa Airlines, was carrying the three lions—two of them grown and the third a three-month-old cub—from Frankfurt to a zoo in London.

The lions escaped from their cages while the plane was over St. Nicholas in northern Belgium and began prowling up and down the fuselage.

Brandishing a fire axe, copilot Max Schomberger, 25, discouraged the animals from again entering the cockpit while Wuhman headed for Brussels at top speed.

"We were in a cold sweat the whole time," the 36-year-old Swiss pilot said later.

Authorities at the airport summoned three fire engines and called out gendarmes with sub-machine-guns to await the landing.

Wuhman set the Dart Herald down safely, switched off the engines and followed Schomberger out the cockpit window. They were the only two crewmen.

The gendarmes threw a net over the cockpit window to keep the lions inside and drew back to await help.

It arrived in the form of two zoo specialists from Antwerp. One of them, Dutch zoologist Mrs. Agtha Gyzen, opened the plane door stealthily and stuck her head in.

"What's new, pussy cat?" she demanded, grabbing the cub by the scruff of its neck and lifting it from the plane.

The second time she returned with a broomstick, entered the plane and pushed them out with a gentle "Go on, pussy; go on pussy."

They said the admirals were all resigned to integration. Now we know what they meant.

'Too Little, Too Late' Charge Pension Critics

OTTAWA (CP)—The government proposed increased pension payments for some Canadians Thursday and immediately started collecting lumps from opposition MPs who said the program was too little and too late.

Health Minister MacEachen, who had promised the Commons a statement on pensions before the summer recess, rose early in Thursday's sitting to describe a program that would guarantee a minimum monthly income of $105 to those who now qualify for the old age pension of $75 a month.

But opposition MPs quickly noted that the government plan does not mean a boost to a $105 pension for everyone. It would only guarantee that no pensioner would have to live on less than $105 a month.

This is just a means test under a different name, said Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), and it would take away the dignity of Canada's pensioners.

Eric Winkler (PC—Grey-Bruce) said the program would be "totally inadequate." He tried to introduce a motion for an emergency debate on pensions but was ruled out of order by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe East), noting Mr. MacEachen

said a bill embodying the pension changes would be brought in when the Commons resumes its sitting in October after a recess, said the changes should be instituted immediately. He asked whether the increased payments would be made retroactive but got no reply from the minister.

"Means test" and "needs test" were the words used by opposition MPs in attacking the program. Mr. MacEachen denied there was any such condition.

However, the expression being used in government circles to describe what will determine that supplemental payment is "income test."

FIGURES TOLD TALE
Mr. Knowles said Mr. MacEachen "let the cat out of the bag" when he said the program would cost an estimated $225,000,000 at the start.

That amounted to less than $15 a month, perhaps as low as $11, for every person now drawing.

SUDBURY WALKOUT GROWS TO 15,000

SUDBURY (AP)—All International Nickel Co. operations in this area came to a standstill today while a wildcat strike at the Leveack mines spread through all plants at which the United Steelworkers of America (U.S.W.) has contracts.

The strike at Leveack erupted in violence late Thursday when a man coming off shift was stopped at the picket line. An argument followed during which another man was stabbed.

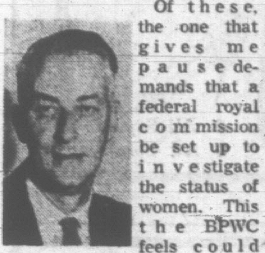

Closed down today were all company mines, two smelters, a refinery and an iron ore recovery plant. About 15,000 men are involved.

Arthur Mayse

As a mere male, and kind of a timid one at that, I hesitate to take issue with the vigorous, earnest militant ladies of the BPWC. Those initials stand for the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, an outfit which, this week in Victoria, has popped off a number of resolutions.

Of these, the one that gives me pause demands that a federal royal commission be set up to investigate the status of women. This the BPWC feels could stand considerable improvement, indicating through a sternly-worded preamble that in Canada the woman remains a second-class citizen.

The charge comes as a surprise to me, since I have been under the impression that Emily Pankhurst and her suffragettes nailed women's rights to the mast some 50 years ago.

As a matter of fact, determined women were making places for themselves in what is mistakenly alleged to be a man's world long before Emily began hacking policemen's shins.

Look at Florence Nightingale. Regard Mme. Marie Curie, and on the other side of the fence, contemplate Ann Bonney, the bloody-minded pirate wench.

Even without the BPWC to champion their rights, these women competed on equal terms with men. Were they, with the probable exception of Miss Bonney, second-class citizens?

There is another significant factor which the BPWC girls overlooked while talking up their resolution. It is known to many a baby-sitter and twice-a-week cleaning woman. Ask these which sex is the tyrant, and prepare for a grim account of bullying, meanness, penny-pinching and sharp practice.

By the man of the house? Oh no! The worst oppressors of women are other women. A firm I once worked for drew its stenographers from a pool presided over by Miss X, a flinty little bit of a thing with a mint julep accent.

She daunted me, and one day after dictating a batch of story refusals to a cute kid who spelled by ear, I asked her what she thought of her boss. The steno glanced over her shoulder. Then her nose quivered and her eyes filled. "I shouldn't tell you this," she said, "but everyone in the steno pool calls her 'The Beast'."

"Does this mean you'd sooner work for a man?" I asked, and drew another nose-quiver, accompanied by a stare of complete amazement. "But of course!" she told me. "Who wouldn't!"

As with most rules, there are exceptions. It seems doubtful, though, that women will fully achieve the BPWC's hopes for them until they learn to get along better with each other.

Beyond these points, I strongly suspect that the resolution in question is at best a paper tiger. Back when Mrs. Pankhurst and her followers were chaining themselves to fence-pallings, a royal commission to enquire into women's status would have made sense.

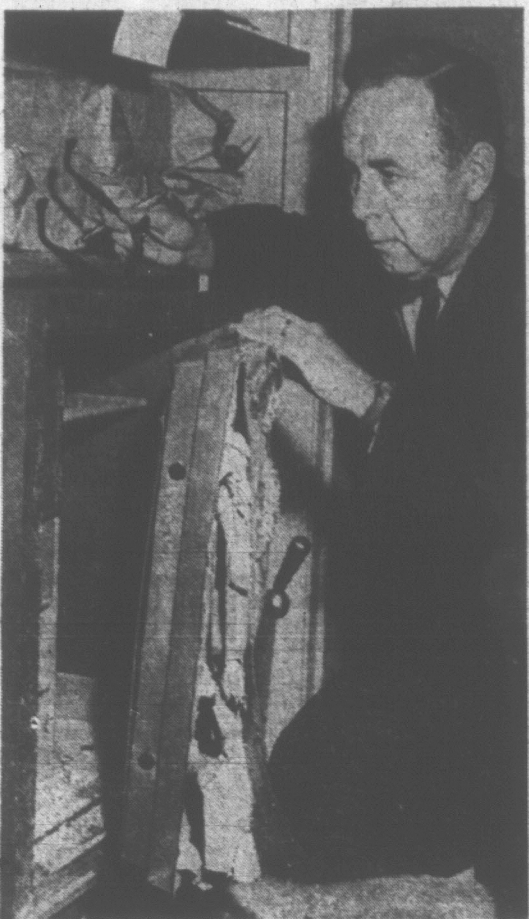

But the once-dominant male has learned a lot since those now-distant days. He, the crafty rascal, no longer needs to be pummeled into yielding entry to his preserves.

Today, his prevailing attitude is, "If they want it, let 'em have it."

The surrender has bought men freedoms they never before enjoyed.

Except for a dedicated few, they can avoid such evening intrusions as the PTA-meeting. No sweat... the women have everything in hand.

We are aware of the Marching Mothers, but who speaks of the marching fathers? Who, in a majority of families, handles the finances and sees that the bills get paid? Who comes home from a hard day at the office, cooks a dinner, puts in a wash, whips through a bout of housekeeping, keeps track of the kids, catches up on the mending, and celebrates her independence by helping pay off the mortgage?

TWO OFFICE ROBBERIES netted thieves about $700 Thursday night. Office manager John Bemister looks over the damage to the safe at Singer Co. of Canada Ltd., 726 Yates, pried open and about $300 taken. Approximately $400 was taken from a combination safe-filing cabinet at Victoria Cablevision Ltd., 3085 Shelbourne.

Major Elevator Expansion Expected for West Coast

A complete investigation of the need for more grain handling and storage facilities on the West Coast is now under way, federal Agriculture Minister J. J. Greene said here today.

He also indicated the government still expects to buy some of the Central Saanich farms hit by the golden nematode infestation.

Mr. Greene was interviewed during a conference in the Legislative Buildings of the agriculture ministers from all provinces of Canada, except Prince Edward Island, hosted by B.C. Agriculture Minister Frank Richter.

"Our sales of 600 million bushels of wheat, I think will become a permanent basis so handling the shipment of this grain has become a key situation," Mr. Greene said.

Although moving at a crawl, the driver almost hit a dog standing in the middle of the road before the policeman pulled her over.

When the officer asked her to park at the curb, she was unable to do so properly after several attempts.

The free food stall for Greater Victoria's poor opens again Saturday after a four-month closure.

The new manager of the stall, Mrs. Joan Price, said public response in food donations has been "wonderful."

But she added: "We can always do with more."

Opening time is 10:30 a.m. at the Elks Hall on Cormorant Street. The stall provides free food for welfare recipients from public donations.

Woman Couldn't Park But Passed B.C. Test

An 87-year-old woman-driver who missed a turn Thursday and ran over a curb, then almost ran over a dog and finally could not park properly, passed a driver exam and had her licence renewed only two months ago.

A city constable in a duty report today said he watched the elderly driver westbound on Simcoe, turn left too wide on to Rendall and run over the curb, then back into the intersection and proceed very slowly down the street.

Admiral Maintains Stony Silence Ottawa Indifference Frustrating; Adds to Confusion

By TERRY IZZARD
Marine Reporter

Rear-Admiral Michael G. Stirling was maintaining a stony silence today in the face of his rumored resignation.

While one admiral has been fired and two have handed in their resignations, the Pacific Coast commander refused to discuss the matter.

A service spokesman who was with the admiral late Thursday night when the crisis broke, said: "The admiral has decided not to say anything at this time."

However, it seems certain that along with the three other rear-admirals, the West Coast commander is all set to resign.

It has been obvious to men who work with the admiral that he has been unhappy for some time.

During one of his few confrontations with the press recently, he made it clear that relations with Ottawa were not all that could be desired.

Normally cool and in charge of the situation, the admiral seemed nervous and more than a little worried by some of the questions.

At one point, when asked about the advisability of retaining some of the navy's older vessels, the admiral stormed:

"I suppose if you had your way there wouldn't be a navy."

While the outburst seemed unwarranted, it became increasingly obvious as the question and answer period progressed, the admiral had good cause to be upset.

What at first seemed to be stalling tactics on his part—"I don't know the answer to that question"—turned out to be a genuine lack of knowledge.

For reasons better known to Ottawa, they have cloaked most matters pertaining to the navy's future in a veil of secrecy which even the top admirals have been unable to pierce.

With some 7,500 navy and civilian personnel on the Pacific Coast looking to him for guidance, the admiral has been in a most unenviable position.

He has even had to admit to close friends in the service that he doesn't know what the future holds in store for them.

Certainly his thoughts of retirement must have begun many months ago when he first realized that all was not as it should be.

How can a man—even a man with experience behind him—that Admiral Stirling has—hope to run a show when his bosses keep him in the dark?

Since taking the hot seat at Esquimalt on Oct. 26, 1964, the Kelowna-born man has seen his active fleet dwindle from 13 to seven.

That will be the total complement by fall when three more of the four remaining ocean-esorts are placed in "hot reserve."

And one of the remaining seven is the training yacht Oriole which can hardly be classed as a fighting ship.

This paring of the fleet has posed the very real problem of possible lay-offs—another question which the admiral has been unable to shed any light on.

'SWIMMER' LOCATED IN ONTARIO

An Esquimalt resident missing for eight days has been located in Ontario.

Donald Dillon, 36, of 816 Dunsmuir, told a friend July 6 he was going swimming near West Bay. Donald Vickers of the same address, with whom Mr. Dillon had been staying while he looked for a job, reported Dillon missing the next day.

Police said today they have received word that Dillon is now in Ontario. He had been employed at Brodie's Bakery Ltd. only two days before he went missing.

City Police Catch Escaper

outside," said Mr. Cleaver, who said he had not always gone fishing on the breakwater.

"Tonight it's jammed with weeds and you can't get a line through."

One night this week there were about 30 or 40 anglers packing, fretting, spinning, casting, bobbing and watching over the inscrutable and sometimes implacably fishless depths off Ogden Point.

"I just like sitting here," Colin said, just sitting there about half way out the half-mile long, 50-year-old cement and granite pier.

"But I saw a guy out at the end get a nice one a couple of hours ago."

"They say they're taking worms," he added languidly dabbling his long and apparently baitless line over the edge.

Colin's uncle, Phil Cleaver of 323 Arundel, rather more vigorous in his approach, was winding up with a weighted, green, thick headline attached to a silver spinner and throwing it a good stone's throw in to shore.

"I'll never get anything with this rig," he said.

"You've got to fish the

On top of this, the 51-year-old admiral has had the added headache of integration which has meant a complete overhaul of day-to-day operations.

With people seeking answers on all sides, he has looked to Ottawa for guidance—only to find that the support he expected was not forthcoming.

The general attitude of headquarters seems to have been: "Wait and see."

Possibly the boys in the East didn't know the answers

themselves—at times it appears even Defence Minister Hellyer didn't know what was going on.

Either way, it has led to frustration and confusion, for Admiral Stirling and his staff.

With the prospect of a comparatively cushy civilian job awaiting him, Admiral Stirling must be sorely tempted to throw in his chips with the boys on the other side of the fence.

If he does—and it seems fairly certain he will—there could be further resignations among the more senior officers with whom he has worked at Esquimalt.

Certainly it will be a big blow to the general morale of an already disillusioned navy.

After all, if an admiral can be so easily dispensed with, what hope is there for a less senior officer?

These are just some of the questions pricking an already sore thumb.

Unless a speedy remedy is forthcoming, the whole hand could well be amputated.

Causeway Clampdown Under Study

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

Victoria council is planning a crackdown on city tour promoters who get too aggressive on the Causeway.

Council members, the city manager and the city solicitor went into closed session in the alderman's lounge following Thursday's council meeting to discuss the touchy problem and lay the groundwork for their attack.

This morning Mayor A. W. Toone said many complaints are being received from tourists and Victorians regarding the hard-sell tour boosters.

"I must admit that I've been down there myself on two occasions and haven't found anything wrong," the mayor said. "But maybe I was there at the wrong time because we are certainly getting complaints."

ENFORCE BYLAW

Mayor Toone said council had decided to ask Chief J. F. Gregory to take a close look at city bylaws governing the distribution of pamphlets on city streets.

"We feel this would be a logical first step," he said. "We do have a bylaw governing the handing out of pamphlets which will later be thrown away and we are asking the police chief to take a close look at it and enforce the law."

Mayor Toone said council would also make a close study of the entire Causeway operation.

"I think the operators, too, should take a close look at the way their employees operate," he said.

"I think if they take a good look at their operations and govern themselves accordingly many of the problems could be eliminated."

It is understood that during the closed session council vetoed a request from a Vancouver-based company to operate more double-decker buses in the city.

BILL MACADAM... amazed at remarks

Air Council Hits Phil's Criticism

The B.C. Aviation Council today made a curt but restrained response to Highway Minister Gagliardi's slam at small commercial airlines in B.C.

At the same time, Attorney-General Robert Bonner said Mr. Gagliardi may have been misunderstood and that he really did not criticize the commercial operations.

Mr. Gagliardi had told reporters the government air fleet was necessary because he would not entrust the lives of employees flying into remote areas to private companies.

QUICKEST, SAFEST

"We feel flying is the quickest and safest method of travel in B.C.—no matter what size plane is used," Gordon Brown, general manager of the B.C. Aviation Council, told the Times.

"We also feel that, in view of the mountainous and bush conditions in this province, our B.C. pilots are among the most capable in the world."

"That's all we'd like to say for publication at present."

Mr. Bonner, who doubles as commercial transport minister, said licensing of pilots and planes is all done by the federal department of transport and not his department.

But he added that he had heard Mr. Gagliardi expound his views and "I don't think he was implying any incompetence or lack of safety on the part of charter companies."

"He was just pointing out that to use the various air charter firms in this province is to rely on equipment of varying standards and personnel of varying experience."

"But when you operate a provincial government service you at least have a uniform high standard of equipment and experience."

"It's not a reflection on the private field," said Mr. Bonner.

But Bill MacAdam, who operates the seven-aircraft Trans-Mountain Air Services in Campbell River, said he was "amazed and astounded" by the remarks.

"Our pilots have thousands and thousands of hours flying time on this coast, our planes are new and have dozens of safety features over those required by the DOT and we have a good safety record," he said.

Big Cuts Seen In Plane Fares

Forecasts Royal Dutch Official

By AB KENT

Transatlantic air fares are likely to be halved in the next five years, bringing a major dilemma to the world's major carriers.

This is the prediction of A. C. Koreman, Canadian general manager of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, who visited Victoria Thursday.

In his first trip to the B.C. capital from head office in Montreal, Mr. Koreman noted a trend toward lower fares for Atlantic flights has put the tariffs at an average $400. Another $200 could be lopped off in the next five years, he said.

The air travel industry is going for mass market and volume traffic in a big way.

'JUMBO' PLANES

"Soon it will be uneconomical to keep existing jet liners in operation," Mr. Koreman said.

The way points to "jumbo" aircraft capable of transporting several hundred passengers at a time, and naturally these will be immensely costly.

For jumbo will be able to finance prices estimated at $20 to $25 million per plane when they become available.

Therefore, Mr. Koreman feels, there is likely to be more mergers of big airlines to bring resources within range of prices.

And there will be much more close co-operation between the world's air carriers, expanding the idea of air union as it already exists in Europe, he said.

CO-OPERATION

There is some evidence of co-operation in Canada now.

Auto Traffic Banned

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Florence is imposing a daily, 3-hour ban on automobile traffic in the centre of the city, granting tourists a more leisurely look at some of its most famous landmarks. The official announcement Wednesday said that starting Saturday cars would be kept out of the centre from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m.

notable between KLM and Canadian Pacific Airlines, and between Air Canada and British Overseas Airways Corp.

But Mr. Koreman voices a complaint common to countries with airlines competing with Canadian carriers, a problem he predicts will be aired in Parliament soon.

That is — Canadian air policy is restrictive and shows too much favor for Canadian airlines.

"Canada maintains a position that Canadian carriers should fly from all points in Canada to a certain point in another country, and that a carrier from that country should fly from all points in that country to a certain point in Canada," Mr. Koreman said.

PRISONER OF WAR

"Since I speak as a representative of a very small country with one international airport, I feel we are at a distinct disadvantage. We are denied the right to fly from any other point than Montreal."

But, CPA flies from Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Toronto and Montreal into Amsterdam. They have the market from across Canada to Holland and points beyond and we don't have access to that market, except via Montreal."

Yet, he said, CPA is unable to handle the market by itself. Koreman, a lawyer, has been with the government-controlled Royal Dutch nearly 20 years prior to which he was with the Dutch civil aviation department, equivalent of Canada's Civil Aviation Branch.

But for 3½ years before that he was a prisoner of the Japanese in Java, having been taken as an artillery lieutenant in the fall of the Dutch East Indies.

He makes these further predictions:

• The struggle for supremacy in the world's "super" aircraft industry will be between Boeing and Lockheed, not between Boeing and Douglas as in the current era.

• Amsterdam's new Schiphol international airport will be Europe's largest, most modern, when it opens in April next year and make Holland the number one European tourist centre.

• KLM will then take a giant step toward solving the major problem facing the world's airlines — fast, accurate reservations — and will apply an automated system to its international operations.

About Cayuga grass rough so thick you could hide in it. About native caddies ferreting out lost balls with their toes.

Since Mr. Williams took up golf 20 years ago at the age of 37 the game has lured him to courses in Singapore, Hong Kong, Rhodesia, Yokohama, Formosa, Mexico and South Africa.

Relaxation to him is 18 holes a day on the Uplands course.

"Marriage takes up a lot of time," he says with satisfaction as his wife Elizabeth irons away in the kitchen.

Mr. Williams is pretty good with an iron too.

Work Stoppage By Hospital's Help Spreads

NEW YORK (AP) — A work stoppage by non-medical employees, demanding more pay spread Thursday from Montefiore Hospital in the Bronx to Mount Sinai Hospital in Manhattan.

About 300 of the employees appeared outside Mount Sinai Hospital and refused to report for work this morning.

Dr. David Pomrinse, associate director of the hospital, which has 1,500 patients, said that if the stoppage continues a transfer of patients to other hospitals would start later in the day.

Pomrinse said the hospital will not open its outpatient clinic today. The surgery schedule will be maintained, he said.

Mount Sinai has about 1,200 non-medical workers.

As picketing resumed outside Montefiore Hospital today, a spokesman for the hospital said he did not expect any of the non-medical employees to report for work today.

Montefiore hospital evacuated about 150 of its 629 patients Wednesday.

Montefiore normally has a total of 1,300 non-medical employees in a 24-hour period, and about 600 are on the day shift.

Last-Ditch Peace Effort By Mrs. Gandhi in Moscow

By JOHN BEST

MOSCOW (CP) — Prime Minister Gandhi of India holds a final round of talks with Premier Alexei Kosygin of the Soviet Union today amid indications the Russians have turned down her Viet Nam peace proposal.

She was expected to make a last-ditch effort to get Kosygin's backing for her call to reconvene the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina but her task appeared hopeless.

In an address Thursday at an Indo-Soviet friendship rally at the Kremlin, at which both leaders spoke, Kosygin ignored the Indian proposal presented to him in private talks.

Instead he hit out at United States "vandalism and barbar-

ity" and renewed an earlier pledge to send volunteers with arms to Viet Nam if North Viet Nam requests them.

Informed sources read Kosygin's speech as a virtual Soviet rejection of Mrs. Gandhi's plan.

WANTS BOMBS STOPPED

In her address, which preceded Kosygin's, the Indian Premier said there should be an end to all bombing of North Viet Nam and that involved parties should take the Viet Nam issue to the conference table. There was no alternative course.

The sources said Kosygin had made clear even before the rally in discussions with Mrs. Gandhi that the Soviet Union could not act without a request for peace talks from Hanoi.

So far the North Vietnamese — and China — have said they are opposed to negotiations without prior acceptance by the United States of Communist conditions.

Mrs. Gandhi leaves for home Saturday.

An hour after she flies out, British Premier Wilson arrives on a similar Viet Nam peace probe. But diplomatic observers said the Russian response to Mrs. Gandhi made it virtually certain he also will fail.

GUARD CALLED

Chicago Riot Tempo Grows

CHICAGO (AP)—The Illinois state guard was called out today for the second time in less than a year as three nights of rioting brought exchanges of gunfire between police and snipers with the disturbances spilling over into daylight looting.

In Thursday night's demonstrations 900 policemen ranged through the area and exchanged gunfire with rioters.

Two Negroes were shot and killed, six policemen including a captain were shot and more than 300 persons were arrested. Many civilians also were wounded.

Some rioting and looting continued in the daylight hours for the first time today, but police reinforcements moved in and blocked off streets. Some police units called for more ammunition, but there was no gunfire after daylight.

The exchange of gunfire between police and demonstrators was the first in a major U.S.

city since 34 persons were slain in California during the Watts racial riots last August.

Governor Otto Kerner ordered 3,000 guardsmen from 15 Chicago units of the Illinois national guard to the scene at the request of Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago.

They will back up some 900 policemen who have been assigned to the area.

Policemen began carrying machine-guns, shotguns, rifles and tear gas Thursday night in addition to pistols and night sticks to combat roving bands of vandals, looters and snipers.

The Chicago Transit Authority shut down bus and elevated train service in the area and po-

Crisis Over Integration

Admiral Discloses
Why He Was Fired

DROOPING CANDLES in living room of Mr. and Mrs. Marian Anders of rural Fairmont, Minn., are perfect evidence of 100-degree temperature in area.

Even daughter Carman, four, found the heat a bit too much. Mrs. Anders said it took about a day for the candles to fold over in the living room.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—One policeman was killed and another seriously wounded when they stopped an auto during a routine patrol in south Philadelphia today.

Other policemen converged on the area and threw up a dragnet for three men seen fleeing on foot.

Terrified
Survivor
Heard Cries

CHICAGO (UPI)—Each of the eight murdered Chicago student nurses let out a "muffled loud cry" as she was slain, the lone survivor of the massacre told police today.

From her hospital bed, Corazon Amurao, told police of the death cries of the eight young women who were strangled and stabbed to death, one by one, by a tall young killer in their townhouse apartment Thursday.

Michael Spiotto, deputy chief of detectives, said Miss Amurao told him she heard the cries as the killer let his bound victims from the bedroom where he held them captive. Miss Amurao, an exchange student from the Philippines, saved herself by rolling underneath a bed while the killer's back was turned.

The mass slaying took his victims from the bedroom one by one. In every case, Miss Amurao said, she heard "a little scream—more like a muffled loud cry" a moment later.

One of the mysteries of the massacre—called by one Chicago official "the crime of the century"—was why no one in the quiet far south side neighborhood heard the girls as they were systematically slaughtered.

Spiotto said he showed the Philippine girl 180 photographs of sexual offenders and she picked out four or five which she said resembled the slayer.

FIND KILLER

He said he was "quite hopeful" the killer would be found. Albert S. Daniel, executive director of South Chicago Community Hospital, was asked whether the killer could have

Hellyer Policy
Under Attack

OTTAWA (CP)—Unification of the armed forces into a one-uniform, common-rank service exploded today into a public dispute involving Defence Minister Hellyer and Rear-Admiral Landymore, who said he has been fired.

Three other rear admirals also were reported on their way out of the services. Naval sources said actions of the four were coincidental and not a planned attack on integration of command or unification of the services.

Rear-Admiral Landymore, 50, chief of Maritime Command and of the Atlantic fleet, said he was fired after refusing to resign.

Rear Admirals Robert Welland, 48, deputy chief of operations at Canadian Forces Headquarters here, and H. C. Burchell, 54, of Ottawa, confirmed they had asked for early retirement.

Rear-Admiral M. G. Stirling, 51, of Esquimalt, B.C., deputy commander of Maritime Command and commander of the Pacific fleet, was also reported to have asked to be retired before reaching the compulsory retirement age of 55. (See page 19.)

The former Conservative defence minister, Douglas Harkness, said here a considerable number of military officers have been asked to pledge personal loyalty to Mr. Hellyer. They were told that if they were not prepared to give such a pledge they would never be promoted and might as well quit, he said.

Rear-Admiral Burchell said he fully supports integration policies but holds different views from Mr. Hellyer on how they should be implemented.

One source said Rear-Admiral Burchell was concerned over economies in technical services which might risk lack of technical and logistic support for the operational forces.

Meanwhile, Mr. Hellyer was on a tour of Western Canada but said in London, Ont., shortly after reports of the departures that he had received no resignations.

(Meanwhile, it was reported in Ottawa that a bushy committee of top naval men have compiled a report for the parliamentary defence committee. They will ask for a royal commission probe of the armed forces and the impact of integration of the services.)

The appeal for a royal commission will be presented to Prime Minister Pearson from a joint committee of the Navy League of Canada; the Naval Officers Association of Canada and the Royal Canadian Naval Association. The committee was named June 20 to prepare a brief for the Commons committee on defence.)

The command crisis blew up within a week of another command upset involving three other senior officers who retired last week before normal retirement age.

They were Lt-Gen. Frank J. Stirling and Lt-Gen. Frank J. Stirling.

The latter was said to have been offered a civilian job which he wanted to accept. There was no elaboration with

Montreal
Hospitals

MONTREAL (CP)—The non-professional staffs of seven Montreal hospitals went on strike at 7 a.m. today, as scheduled, at the opening of a strike of 21 hospitals across Quebec.

Pickets set up lines shortly after the strike deadline. A union spokesman said 7,000 workers were out, 3,000 of them in the Montreal area.

Raymond Couture, C.N.T.U. strike director, said today a further 16 hospitals would be strike-bound at 7 a.m. Saturday. He did not say which hospitals would be affected.

Last-ditch talks aimed at averting the walkout apparently failed. Mediation between the Quebec Hospital Association and the National Federation of Services (CNTU) was carried on throughout the night in a downtown hotel.

The seven hospitals represent about 4,500 beds. Two hospitals in Sherbrooke were reported being picketed.

Further negotiations were rescheduled to begin shortly after 8 a.m. Reached at his hotel room by telephone, Paul-Emile Olivier, leader of the hospital association's negotiating committee, would make little comment.

"I can't say much at this time," he said. "However, today should be a very good day for negotiations."

"Always, we have to be optimistic. We've made some progress in the last two days. But I can't say any more."

Landymore
Wouldn't Quit

By JACK BRAYLEY

HALIFAX (CP)—Rear-Admiral William Landymore, sea operations chief and Canada's No. 1 operational sailor, said today he has been fired after he refused to resign "and it's only a matter of deciding the date of my departure."

The admiral, on leave at his nearby Lawrencetown farm, thus confirmed an Ottawa report about his status. He said his dispute with Defence Minister Hellyer is over the armed forces unification program.

"Integration" wasn't the issue even though it was proving to be more "expensive," he said. His own command administration costs have tripled under the program. This had made things difficult but "we were trying to make it work."

The issue was the destruction of the navy's identity through a common rank structure with the other armed forces and a single uniform "without any apparent economy or efficiency."

As far as the single uniform went it merely indicated an expenditure "for another 100,000 uniforms." This didn't seem to affect the economy.

SAW PEARSON
The admiral said that in pressing his point he had an informal conversation with Prime Minister Pearson after he was dismissed.

Commenting on departures and rumors of departures from the high command defence quarters, Admiral Landymore said there had been no "collusion." Many high-ranking officers had been in Ottawa to attend a dinner for the retiring defence chief, Air Chief Marshal Frank R. Miller, and "I was shocked to find that we had all come independently to the same conclusion about the program as it affected our identity as a service."

There was absolutely "no ganging up," the admiral added with an emphatic shake of his head. There were "no sour grapes" involved because of the leapfrog promotion of Commodore Ralph Hennessey over the heads of senior admirals to the rank of vice-admiral.

"In fact," Admiral Landymore said, "we had all made our appeals to the minister and decisions had been made before Admiral Hennessey's appointment."

His own critical talk with the minister took place Thursday, June 23.

The admiral, informal in slack and open-neck shirt after some early-morning exercise in one of his hay fields, said: "It's as simple as this: I can't see where any efficiency or economy is involved in taking away the navy's identity."

He said he had come to this decision in support of the officers in his own command who found the "unification" prospect "very unpalatable."

"What does the minister expect to gain by destroying our identity?" the admiral asked with a shrug. "His motives may be good politics but there is no

Civil Control
Main Issue

EDMONTON (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer said today the central issue in his disagreement with four senior naval officers over armed forces integration policy is civil control of the military.

The minister told an airport press conference on his arrival to fill a speaking engagement that it is a question "whether a minister can set policy or a small group of military can dictate policy."

Mr. Hellyer denied a statement by Douglas Harkness, former Progressive Conservative Defence Minister, that he had demanded a pledge of personal loyalty from senior officers of the forces.

"I have never in my life asked an officer for a loyalty oath," the minister said.

The U.S. space agency said the small storm, now about 800 miles southeast of the cape, failed to turn northward as expected and was bearing down on a westerly track that would bring it to this area late Sunday or Monday.

AFTER TENSE OPENING

'Most Productive' Commons Session

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—After a slow, snail-paced start, the present Parliament may well turn out to be one of the most productive in history.

When the 1966 session recessed Thursday night after 117 sitting days, the 27th Parliament had passed 50 items of government legislation, including about 20 major bills.

In addition, MPs and senators began work on 15 other items, which are scheduled to be cleaned up after the session resumes Oct. 3.

The session opened Jan. 18 in a tense, electioneering atmosphere carried over from the Nov. 8 vote in which the minority Liberal government came back with 131 of the 265 seats—two more than it won in the 1963 election.

Noisy battles dominated the first three months, first on the government's stand against boosting old-age pensions to $100 from $75 a month, then on national security, organized crime and sex.

Bedlam prevailed for three sitting days—in early March over the Gerda Munsinger case. The public image of Parliament plummeted. Sobered legislators buckled down to work after their Easter recess.

A steady stream of bills and appropriations received royal assent, implementing some of the key planks in the Liberals' election platform.

PASSED WELFARE PLAN

The Canada Assistance Plan became law. It integrates a variety of new and existing federal—provincial welfare programs, costing Ottawa an estimated $250,000,000 the first year.

A $500,000,000 fund, was allocated for construction and expansion of medical facilities during the next 15 years. The fund will finance new medical, dental and nursing schools and health research centres.

Another fund of $50,000,000 was created to assist development of depressed rural areas and the Atlantic Development Board received an extra $50,000,000.

The committee system went into high gear, with more than 20 committees investigating such issues as birth control, divorce, auto safety, drug prices and CBC public affairs programming.

Despite the high volume of work, MPs and senators still face a big backlog when they return in October.

Dock Strike Bill Brings Sharp Blasts

OTTAWA (CP)—Three recorded and eight standing votes on a government bill aimed at settlement of the last and thorniest issues of the Quebec dock strike marked the closing hours of Thursday's session of the Commons.

A stubborn opposition said the government was trying to get advance approval of any recommendations Commissioner Laurent Picard may make in an inquiry into automation procedures in the three ports that were affected by the strike—Montreal, Trois-Rivières and Quebec City.

WILL BE BINDING

Under the terms of the waterfront bill, Dr. Picard's recommendations will be binding on the International Longshoremen's Association and the Shipping Federation of Canada, the parties involved in the 39-day strike that ended June 14.

It resulted in a 40-cent hourly wage increase this year and next for the longshoremen, but the thorniest issue was that of automation on the docks.

Conservatives and New Democrats joined in strong opposition to the bill. They said the government was forcing compulsory arbitration on the ILA as a result of a deal made by Labor Minister Nicholson with the shipping federation.

Mr. Nicholson said strikers and shippers were aware that binding legislation would back the inquiry. The ILA has said it would co-operate with the inquiry and respect the results.

David Lewis (NDP, York South) sparked the first vote with an amendment that would have sent the bill to the Commons standing committee on labor and employment, where he said, all sides could give their version.

QUESTIONS BACKGROUND

Mr. Lewis referred to Dr. Picard's "management background" and said the Commons should not approve anything until it has some idea what he will recommend.

Robert McCleave (PC-Halifax) said the commissioner could force dockworkers to use mules and elephants to unload ships or wear bikinis in winter. The government benches voted down the amendment. A second recorded vote on the bill approval in principle.

The opposition then forced eight standing votes on every clause and stage of the bill. It was given third reading on a first recorded vote, then went to the Senate, which passed it in 15 minutes.
